BOLSHEVISTS IN FAILURE TO CARRY ON TRADE PLANS

Krassin's Attitude Before London Officials Causes Suspicion

OLD WAR SPIRIT

Moscow Government Is Suspected Of Evil Designs On Future

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 20.—Reuter is informed that recent statements by M. Krassin confirm the views held in London that the Bolshevists do not intend to carry out the trade agreement. Furthermore, while vaguely promising to cease their propaganda in Asia, they exclude Mesopotamia, Afghanistan and Persia, from this undertaking.

There is growing evidence to show that the old war spirit is again ruling in Moscow, and that troops are massing on the frontiers of the Soviet's neighbors.

A proclamation issued by the Chief Commissary on the Turkestan front, illuminates the fact that the Soviet has not abandoned its campaign of intrigue and hostility towards India. The proclamation, which is addressed to the Red division proceeding to the Pamir country, enjoins upon all to promote a revolutionary spirit among the "liberty-loving tribes of Northern India, and to refute the mass of calumnies spread by the agents of British Princes, Lords and bankers. Long live the Alliance of the Revolutionary Peoples of Europe and Asia!"

Airplanes Make Unusual Flights In Indo-China

Carry Governor General From Hanoi To Saigon Without Mishap

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Jan. 20.—French military aviators have just accomplished two remarkable exploits with Breguet machines in Indo-China.

Without any special preparation, the Governor-General of Indo-China was conveyed from Hanoi to Saigon. The first part of the journey was made by aeroplane from Hanoi to Thakhek, on the north-eastern bend of the Mekong, a distance of over 500 kilometres, while the remainder—about 1,000 kilometres—was accomplished by seaplane, making a total of over 1,000 kilometres.

The second flight was in the extremely mountainous and difficult region of Laos. Both flights were carried out with complete success, and without any mishap to person or machine.

Foreign Advisors In U.S. Favoring Navy Disarmament

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Jan. 20.—The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate has reported favorably upon Senator Borah's resolution proposing negotiations for the reduction of naval armaments.

Instead, however, of the negotiations originally proposed for a fifty percent reduction during the next five years, the Committee proposed negotiations to provide for such reductions as could be agreed upon.

It decided not to include France and Italy in the scope of the resolution as it felt that other nations would follow the lead of the three principal naval powers originally named (great Britain, the United States and Japan).

The resolution of Senator Walsh, that the United States have an American representative on the Disarmament Commission of the League of Nations, was defeated by eight votes to three.

Washington, January 20.—The Senate Committee on Foreign relations today amended the Borah resolution on naval disarmament and then reported favorably upon it. Whether it will be acted upon by the Senate this session, however, remains doubtful.

In any event the wind has been taken out of its sails by the expectation of an early move in this direction by President-Elect Harding.

It is thought, however, that the approval of Congress would be useful as indicating the sentiment of the country and strengthening the hands of the future President.

Rear-Admiral Strauss To Command U.S. Asiatic Fleet

Rear-Admiral Strauss

REAR-Admiral Joseph Strauss, who will succeed Admiral Albert Gleaves as commander of the United States Asiatic fleet. Admiral Strauss gained fame during the war by directing the laying of the great mine field in the North Sea.

Admiral Strauss is expected to arrive in Shanghai next Saturday on the Empress of Russia and will go to Manila on the C.P.O.S. liner. Admiral Gleaves, who is now in Vladivostok conducting an investigation of the killing of Lieutenant W. H. Langdon, by a Japanese soldier returns here next week on the U.S.S. New Orleans and will board the destroyer Elliott at Shanghai for the trip to Manila where he will officially turn over his command to his successor.

Admiral Gleaves will then go to Hongkong on the Elliott and will there board the Empress for the voyage to Vancouver.

COLUMBIA CLUB WILL BUY LAND FOR NEW HOME

Organisation In Excellent Condition, Officers Report At Annual Meeting

With a membership which has more than doubled, plans under way for the purchase of 50 mow of land for a new club site, the erection of a club building, and financial affairs in an excellent condition, the reports given at the annual meeting of the Columbia Country Club held yesterday afternoon show that the past year marks one of the most successful years in the history of the club.

W. A. B. Nichols, president of the organisation and W. A. Chapman, secretary, brought out in their reports the striking success of the club during the past year and the bright outlook for the organisation for the future.

The Board of Governors will proceed at once with the purchase of the land for the new club and with the incorporation of the club under the laws of the Philippine Islands. Following the reports the annual election of the members of the Board of Governors took place.

The members of the new board are Messrs. C. W. Atkinson, A. Bassett, H. B. Lane, R. T. Bryan Jr., W. A. Chapman, J. H. Dollar, W. Morris, A. T. Harr, L. Everett, Carl Crow, J. S. Potter and W. R. Smith.

The members elected to the balloting committee are Messrs. F. R. Sites, W. A. B. Nichols, F. C. Noble, D. D. Patterson, R. W. Hamlet, J. B. Davies, E. Stocker and R. A. Deming.

REBEL HOSTAGES IS THREAT OF OFFICER

(Reuter's Service)

London, January 20.—The officer commanding in Dublin has notified the public that unless bomb and rifle attacks on lorries and motor cars conveying troops and police cease, known rebels will be carried on the lorries and cars as hostages.

London, Jan. 20.—Dublin Castle announces that a police patrol has been ambushed near Glenwood, County Clare. Seven of its members, including a district inspector and a sergeant were killed and a sergeant and constable wounded, while the car in which the party were traveling was burned and their arms taken. The attackers' casualties are unknown.

CHITA DECIDES TO CALL BACK METAL MONEYS

Paper Is Decreed To Be Substitute For Gold And Silver Coin

VLADIVOSTOK OBJECTS

Tokio Authorities Told Their Agents Are Not Keeping Agreements

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, Jan. 20.—The Chita authorities have instructed the branches of the State Bank to withdraw silver and gold currency, and to leave in circulation the paper money issued last June, also Soviet money of equal tender with the above.

Instructions have also reached Vladivostok from Chita that Government employes are to be sent to Chita, in view of the scarcity, and that those who refuse are to be dismissed. In most instances the employes are refusing to comply.

The Chita Government, through its representative at Vladivostok, has complained to the Japanese Foreign Office in Tokio that the Japanese military authorities are in many instances not adhering to their proclamations.

TROOPS NEED FOOD

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, Jan. 20.—Dr. Rudolph Hoselitz, an investigator of conditions in the new Far Eastern Republic of Siberia, states that an economic crisis is rapidly approaching in the Trans-Baikal. There is a serious shortage of food, clothing and medicine, even in the army, with the exception of the front the troops.

The commander of the Reds at Dauria is without candles or kerosene, and the headquarters offices cannot work after sundown. The government departments at Chita are short of paper and other office supplies. Telegrams are written on the back side of used sheets. The children of many families in the city are unable to go out of doors, as they have no clothes. One of the most serious dearths is the lack of sugar.

No supplies are coming from Soviet Russia, and almost no goods are leaking through from China past the closed Manchuli frontier. The situation of the people who in the main are inclined to hold the communists responsible for their present plight, is becoming desperate

The army is said to be the sole prop of the new government. Most of the soldiers are glad to be in service, as they get the best of what little there is, and are much better provided for than the civilians. There is, however, according to the investigator, little real morale or spirit of fight in them. The army is principally useful as a threat, and the population, being of reduced spirit on account of physical hardships, is easily overawed.

ARMY CONTROLS ELECTION

The elections are being manipulated by the army, but the political situation is not encouraging, as there is official graft even among the communist officials, and no real leader of administrative merit aside from Krasnoschekoff exists. The salaries of officials are 7,500 R. or about Gold $11.50 per month.

The government plans to monopolise the fur trade, but lacks experience or equipment to increase the success of the industry.

Conditions at Irkutsk are stated to be equally as bad, and as far east as Tomsk there is little betterment. Omsk is more fortunate. At Blagovestchensk the gold reserves are nearly used up.

There are about 10,000 troops at Chita, five hundred of whom are Hungarians.

The attitude of the troops and civilians toward the Japanese is said to be one of hatred and fear.

Sherman In Attack On Trade Commission

(U. S. Naval Radio through Reuter)

Washington, January 20.—Senator Sherman today attacked the Federal Trade Commission, charging that the Commission had seriously impaired the country's meat exports by circulating abroad its report that the "Big Five" holds a monopoly.

He said that the chairman of the Commission glories in the fact that he broke down the packers' export trade.

MANY QUESTIONS FACE JAPANESE DIET'S OPENING

League Of Nations, Anglo-Japan Alliance, American Relations

INTERNAL REFORM FACTOR

Kokuminto Wants Curtailing Of Military Expenditure And Greater Industry

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Jan. 20.—In view of the Diet's opening on Saturday, today has been marked by the greatest political activity, and party meetings were held for the purpose of framing the platforms.

The Kenseikai policy includes the establishment of the League of Nations on a more practical basis, the maintenance of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, friendly relations with America, the settlement of pending questions on a basis of mutual understanding, the adoption of a co-operative policy towards China, and the early withdrawal of troops from Siberia.

RACIAL EQUALITY

Viscount Kato, the leader of the party, in the course of a speech, accused the Administration of failure regarding the racial equality question, through not having introduced a discussion upon it at the recent session of the League of Nations. There had also been a serious failure of policy as regards China, which, however, was rather attributable to the disturbed condition of the Republic. The most urgent question was the restoration of order in China and the suppression of Bolshevist tendencies.

OFFENSE IN SIBERIA

As regards Siberia, the Government's policy was "offence rather than failure." He contended that the troops should have been withdrawn on the withdrawal of the Czechs, or increased to overcome the Bolshevik elements. An early settlement of the California question was impossible. Provided the negotiations were conducted in the friendliest spirit, the Japanese demands, could, he asserted, be insisted upon without aggravating the situation.

The Kokuminto favored a through-going program of internal reform, the curtailment of military expenditure, and the development of industrial power, contending that "the deciding factor lies in the superiority of industrial power and national wealth, and no longer in the superiority of arms."

PEKING CABINET APPROVES FUND FOR EDUCATION

French Government Will Co-operate In Starting Commercial School

USE EX-GERMAN PLANT

Joint Direction Will Be Exercised By Two Governments' Offices

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Jan. 20.—The Chinese Cabinet has authorised the Minister of Finance to furnish funds for the establishment at Shanghai of a commercial school under the joint direction of the French and Chinese Governments.

The French Government will contribute £3,000 towards the cost of erection, and the two Governments have undertaken to share the running expenses, which are calculated at £13,000 per annum.

The school, which will be located in the former German Medical and Engineering School (Deutsche Medizin und Ingenieurschule) on Rue Lafayette, will be known as the French School of Technology. This building was taken over by the French Concession authorities when the war opened.

Chinese and French educationalists in China are showing marked interest in the school which will offer many opportunities to the Chinese students. The school will be a preparatory institution and the graduates will be qualified to enter the French Chinese University at Lyons.

Twelve instructors from leading French Universities are en route to Shanghai. The faculty will include 12 French and 12 Chinese instructors. Modern machinery is being imported from France for the school and will be installed as soon as possible.

Monsieur Maybon, who has been in France for the past year returned to Shanghai late in November and has since been in Peking. He will become principal of the new school.

Japanese Make Bid For Trade In China

Tokio, Jan. 20.—Some 90 representative businessmen, as well as Prefectural officials, at a meeting yesterday at Yokohama, organised an association for the promotion of Sino-Japanese trade.

Elections Called For Next Spring May Never Take Place, Peking Prediction

By Upton Close, China Press Staff Correspondent

Peking, January 20.—With the peace of the country becoming daily more threatened by the gradual convergency toward a struggle of the rivalry between the war lords of Chihli and Fengtien, General Tsao Kun and Chang Tso-lin, and the aggressive military actions taken by southern commanders against Hupeh, Hunan and Kiangsi, the election issue is falling into abeyance. There are now, indeed, many politicians in the capital, particularly those of the Yenchiu Hsi (meaning "Investigation Society" —the new name of the old Chinputang or "Progress" Party, who freely predict that the parliamentary elections promulgated by Presidential mandate the latter part of last October and later designated to take place during April and May of this spring will never be held.

SOUTH NOT IMPRESSED

Premier Chin's party, which hoped by means of the elections to further the reunification of the country and rid the government of the old Anfu parliament which has been without a quorum since the Anfu overturn, and consequently has been unable to give the necessary legislative sanction to make the present Cabinet substantive instead of "acting," finds that the new elections are going to accomplish neither aim, for the southern irreconcilables seem not in the least impressed by this attempt to show zeal for the constitutional provisions, and the present parliament members refuse to receive their dismissal so gracefully.

They have, indeed, discomfited the present government by pointing out that if the government elects to consider them as of illegal status, then President Hsu, who holds office by virtue of their choice and sanction, is of the same statue. They have added strength to the enemies of the government by turning to Canton for sympathy, and Canton has been quick to capitalise the situation.

CHAOTUNG PARTY QUITTING

The Premier's party is not the only party which has lost zest in the elections. There is evidence that the Chiaotung or Communications clique, which, immediately upon the promulgation of the elections, laid plans for an extensive and expensive election campaign with a view to capturing the coming Parliament, has become discouraged by the realisation that the backing of Tsao Kun, which it has sought, is, chiefly because of the attitude of contempt which his leading General, Wu Pei-fu holds, the Chiaotung and in fact all politicians, not to be depended upon.

Apprehending that without this backing parliamentary control is worthless, and that in event of the clash between the Chihli and Fengtien militarists which seems bound to occur before the summer, politicians of all parties will be swept aside ruthlessly no matter at what expense they have bulwarked their interests, the Chiaotung people have apparently given the campaign up as a bad investment, and have recalled their electioneers who had been sent with large funds to the various provincial capitals and trading centers, to Peking.

It is anticipated that the general loss of interest in the elections will influence the promulgation of a mandate before many days postponing the date, and that before the arrival of this deferred date, another appeal to arms liquidating all political schemes and ravishing the plains of North China will sweep the election plan into the limbo of the unborn.

DISARMAMENT OF GERMANY IS FIRST DEMAND OF FRANCE IN MOVE TO ENFORCE REPARATION

Customs Seizure Threat Made In Event Losers In World War Fail To Meet Obligations

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 20.—With the advent of the new French Ministry, the reparations negotiations, begun in Brussels before Christmas, have been speeded up in Paris. In the hope of finding a practical solution which will enable the Allied chiefs to reach a decision at the forthcoming conference next week.

Today's papers in Paris declare that the Allied experts have drafted and signed recommendations to the Supreme Council that Germany shall be called upon to pay five minimum annual instalments of £480,000,000.

NO GERMAN ASSENT

This program has been drawn up without the assent of the German delegates whose chief, Herr Bergmann, has refused to agree to the amount.

The Echo de Paris asserts that, if the payments are not forthcoming, the customs will be seized, and certain monopolies taken over or formed.

SHIPPING DELIVERED

Paris, Jan. 20.—The Reparations Commission announces that 2,054,729 gross tons of shipping were delivered to the Commission up to December 31 last, of which 2,019,654 tons represented steamships, 9,750 trawlers, and 25,325 sailing ships. Germany is still under obligation to deliver half a million tons.

Up to the present, the Commission has allocated 1,477,839 tons to Great Britain, 166,224 to France, 107,301 to Italy, 28,677 to Japan and 15,831 to Belgium.

London, January 20.—Notwithstanding the apparent disinclination manifested in some German quarters to tackle the question of reparations to the Allies' satisfaction, Reuter gathers from an authoritative source that the German Government fully realises the necessity of acceding to the proposals for a partial discharge of the indemnity by five quinquennial fixed instalments at the outset.

The acceptance of this proposition will enable the Brussels Conference to discuss Germany's total indebtedness.

A Reuter Berlin message, giving a semi-official statement on the subject, says that M. Briand visited the German Ambassador at Paris. The latter expressed the opinion that Germany would only be able within the next few years partially to meet the sum claimed, including coal and material in kind.

According to the Berliner Tageblatt, the Ambassador further suggested the German retention of Upper Silesia, the release of German property abroad, the reduction of the costs of occupation, freedom of trade and the restitution of a portion of the German merchantile tonnage.

Striking Students In India Prevent Final Examinations

Disturbers Lie In Front Of Doors To Stop Candidates' Entrance

(Reuter's Service)

Calcutta, January 20.—The students strike has spread to a number of up-country colleges, and a majority of the Calcutta students remain out. The strikers prevented candidates from the entering the final law examination hall by lying on the ground against the doors.

The Bengal Provincial Congress has passed a resolution, calling on the people of Bengal to boycott all functions connected with the visit of the Duke of Connaught.

Unemployment Is Menace In England

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 20.—The Labor Gazette shows that there was a marked increase in unemployment during December. Altogether 748,000 persons were registered on December 31 at the labor exchanges, of whom half a million were men, 188,000 women, and the remainder youths and girls.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Jan. 20.—The declaration of the new Cabinet's policy was delivered in the Chamber today by the Premier, M. Aristide Briand, and in the Senate by M. Marraud, the Minister of the Interior.

Dealing with foreign relations, the declaration says:

"The Government are fully conscious of the magnitude of their task. We have a treaty of peace with Germany, but we have not yet a real peace, which can be considered solid and durable—a peace of justice and morality which will safe-guard our essential rights and ensure the security of France.

"We shall only obtain this security if Germany is disarmed. That is the vital question for France, and points to the most sacred and first duty of the Government. We shall not fail in that duty.

GERMANY MUST PAY

"Reparations, the restoration of the devastated soil, ruined industries and financial equilibrium, are only possible if Germany fulfils the obligations as regards reparations imposed on her by the Treaty of Versailles. In this we shall have the support of our Allies, and we shall ask it of them in the name of law and justice, for which we fought, and through which we gained the victory.

"The execution of the Treaty involves the penalty of the great war and the consecration of victory.

"Germany is conquered, but none of her mines and none of her manufactures has been destroyed. Her powers of production remain the same, and the exchange situation brought upon her by defeat open up for her the largest hopes of economic expansion. In fact, it is possible to foresee her speedy recuperation. Far be it from us to place any obstacle in the way of such recovery, but for the prosperity of the aggressors, following upon their defeat, to contrast with the ruin of the victors, would be a challenge to the most elementary moral justice which France cannot accept.

FRANCE IS PACIFIC

"Republican France is essentially pacific, and it is by peaceful means that she would induce Germany to carry out her contractual obligations. France claims all her due, which is reasonable. She does not ask the impossible.

"Our aim can only be attained in close accord with our allies. This accord is the cardinal condition for the settlement of all the questions that are holding up the effective restoration of peace, and we shall do all we can to maintain and develop it.

"We are firmly confident that our great friend and ally, England, will help us to the full extent of her power. Indeed nothing can any longer impair the relations between these two great countries, which have learned to know and esteem each other better in the stern battles in which they shed their blood in common.

"It is their intimate union which insures the peace of the world. Whether it be question of the execution of the Treaty of Versailles, the solution of the Near Eastern problem, the maintenance of the peace established by the treaties affecting Central Europe, or of our relations with the peoples of Eastern Europe, the close alliance between Great Britain and France is the basis of our foreign policy.

"As regards Italy, efforts will be used to draw tighter the bonds, so happily strengthened during the war, between the two great Latin nations. We confidently expect to find in Rome the same friendly attitude towards the questions which are of import to us that the Italians found in Paris towards the solution of the Adriatic questions.

COUNT ON AMERICA

"The time-honored friendship between France and the United States and the ineffaceable memories of our common history—which, as in the past, so again, if necessary, in the future, would mingle their blood on the field of battle—guarantees the continuance of this union in peace as in war. We are sure that our American friends will give us the same invaluable support towards recovering reparation for our injuries that decided the victory in the great war, wherein we defended together the cause of civilisation.

"The unquestionable interests which link up with Belgium by a military agreement for our common defence have prepared the way, in spite of the difference between our fiscal systems, for the conclusion of the economic entente which is equally desired on both sides of the frontier. The union between the French and Belgian peoples has been cemented by their sacrifices, and is as desirable for the economic development of

U.S. And German Ministers Sit At Same Dining Table

(U. S. Naval Radio through Reuter)

New York, Jan. 20.—According to a despatch from the Hague, the American and German Ministers dined at the same table at a State dinner given by the Queen for the heads of the diplomatic missions. It is believed that this is the first such event since the world war.

FRANCE TO ASK IMMEDIATE AID FOR AUSTRIANS

England And Italy Will Be Shown Peril Of Lack Of Support

(U. S. Naval Radio through Reuter)

New York, Jan. 20.—The following telegram has been received from Paris: "At the Inter-Allied Conference here on Monday, France will ask England and Italy to join in giving immediate financial aid to Austria, in order to save Austria from starvation and falling into the hands of Germany. It is understood that England is in favor of this move.

"Two projects have been decided on. One provides for a loan of $250,000,000, to be handled by the Austro-Hungarian Bank under Allied direction, and the other proposes the sale of certain tax (?) collections for 200,000,000 francs in gold. The Austrian Minister states that the crops scarcely suffice to feed six percent of the population, and the country is almost destitute of coal."

GERMANS CAPTURE HULL IRON ORDERS

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 20.—A telegram from Hull states that a local firm has lost contracts in competition with Germany which would have kept the works employed for two years.

With a view to checking the loss of heavy orders that are daily going to German, Belgian and American firms, the Scottish steel makers announce reductions in prices varying from 20 to 70 shillings per ton. This is the third reduction in two months. The Belgians continue to dump iron bars at prices far below the cost of Scottish bars.

Child Meets Death When Motor Car Of Belgian King Skids

(Reuter's Service)

Louvain, Jan. 20.—The King of the Belgians, while motoring from Brussels, was entering Louvain, when turning to avoid two children who were running behind a tramcar, the back part of his car skidded, knocking down both children and killing one of them.

Britain And America To Be Closer Related Says U.S. Navy Man

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 20.—Speaking at a luncheon given in London, Admiral Albert P. Niblack, of the United States Navy, emphasised that Britain and America would come into closer association in the future. America had made up its mind to become a maritime people. Hence the two countries must face competition for foreign markets as a sporting proposition.

the two countries as for their common security.

"Our relations with our friends and Allies in Central Europe will continue to derive inspiration from the generous sentiments of trust of which we received testimony during the war, wherein we fought for the triumph of right.

TURK PEACE NEEDED

"There is an urgent need for peace with Turkey, and the conversations with our Allies, having regard to the new state of affairs, are being continued amicably towards the solution of the Near Eastern question.

"We have not forgotten the sacrifices that the great Russian nation made at the beginning of the war in the cause of world-liberty. The Russian people shed their blood so generously that we feel towards them an unalterable gratitude, but in the present state of affairs we shall no more recognise the Soviet Government than preceding French Governments have done.

"We cannot resume relations with Russia until there is installed in Moscow a Government which really represents the Russian people, and will recognise the obligations of the preceding Governments of that country. We are not called upon to intervene in Russia's domestic affairs, but it is impossible to allow the Soviet armies to leave their territory to attack the Allies. That is the program of foreign policy that we submit for your approval."

The remainder of the declaration may be briefly summarised as follows:

ARMY

1.—The burden to be reduced to the limits of strict necessity. Military service to be reduced, and the organisation better adapted to the modern conditions of national life.

FINANCE

2.—Public expenditure to be curtailed; rapid winding-up of the organisations created during the war; restoration of the balance between expenditure, thus reduced, and revenue; the reintroduction of order, regularity and clarity in the State finance.

ECONOMIC RECUPERATION

3.—Freedom should be restored to agricultural, commercial and industrial interests. The declaration contemplates the gradual restoration of the devastated regions, towards which those affected should be asked to lend their support.

UTILISATION OF COLONIAL RESOURCES

4.—A comprehensive program will shortly be submitted to Parliament with a view to developing the industrial equipment, health and education of those living under French citizenship and protection, and generally for bringing them the benefits of civilisation.

SOCIAL REFORM

5.—Bills embodying administrative reforms will be introduced shortly.

Answer Is Filed To Neuwirt Suit In American Court

An answer was filed yesterday in the United States Court for China to the suit that was started on December 29 last by H. E. Neuwirt versus Reids Ltd. to effect collection on a promissory note for $1,368.

All the allegations of the original petition are admitted in the answer, but as a set-off it is contended that the plaintiff is indebted to Reids Ltd. in a sum considerably larger than the amount of the promissory note. The answer sets forth that on November 7, H. E. Neuwirt purchased from Reid, Evans & Company 885 cases of wines and after this contract had been transferred to Reids Ltd., this firm shipped 25 cases valued at $7,292. Against this amount, said to be from Neuwirt, a credit of $1,171 is allowed leaving a balance of $6,120. The answer asks for a judgment for this amount remaining due less the amount of the promissory note.

Are Storing Cotton For Raise In Price

(Reuter's Service)

Cairo, Jan. 20.—A co-operative syndicate has been formed to store approximately 2,000,000 lbs. of cotton, with a view to holding it for a raise in price. The syndicate is assuming that the banks will finance it, but experts are doubtful about this. It is stated, however, that high authorities are lending moral support to the project.

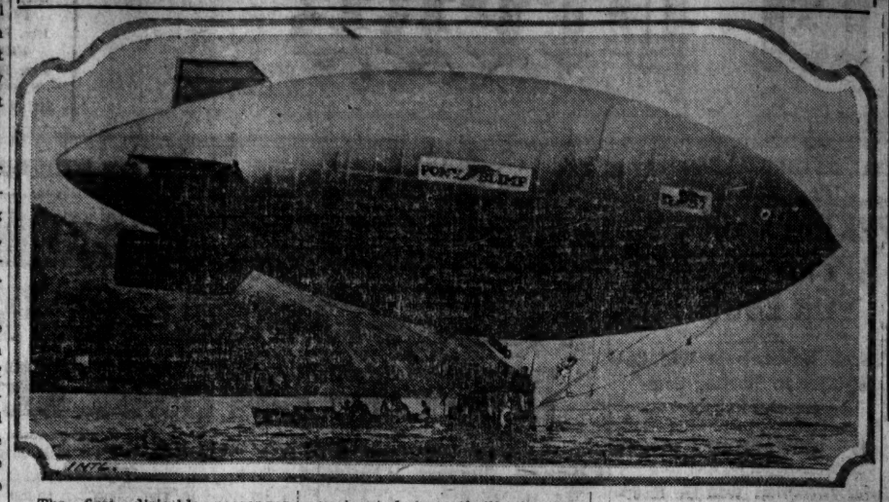
Dirigible Passenger Service Starts At Los Angeles



The first dirigible passenger line has been established in Los Angeles, Cal. Week-end trips are being made between Los Angeles and Catalina, which require half an hour. Upon the arrival of the blimp at Catalina the passengers are treated to a thrill when the dirigible alights on the water to discharge and take on passengers and mail. It is the first time in the history of aviation that a lighter than air machine has alighted on water. It is done by means of water ballast and the passengers are transferred to a waiting motor boat. The photograph shows the pony blimp discharging passengers at Catalina.

Mixed Court Jottings

John Pihlag, a Lettish subject, was fined $10 in the Mixed Court yesterday for being drunk and disorderly on the North Szechuen Road Wednesday afternoon and assaulting the Sikh policeman who arrested him. Pihlag was previously sentenced to a month's imprisonment on a similar charge by the United States Court. At that time he was engaged as carpenter on an American ship. Being now discharged from the ship he was denied recognition at the American Court.

Another drunk and disorderly charge heard yesterday was that against Stephano Kuduk, a Russian Pole whom Assessor Hutchison took severely to task. Kuduk has been in Court several times previously on the same charge. In sentencing the accused to four weeks imprisonment the Assessor said that the only thing which kept the court from expelling him from the Settlement was the fact that a foreigner of his type would starve or die of exposure if compelled to remain in Chinese territory.

"You would have to go and try to find lodging in some Chinese hovel," said the Assessor, "and you would get no food, and the end of it would be that you would die in a ditch like a lost dog. For that reason I am unwilling to expel any foreigners of your type, but if this thing continues you shall be expelled."

Kuduk declared that he would never get drunk again and said he would leave Shanghai for Vladivostok if allowed to do so. In passing sentence the Court stated that if the accused is able to secure passage he may be sent aboard ship and allowed to leave.

A charge of assault brought against Sophai Pisterman, a Russian woman living at 18B Haining Road, by Mrs. B. Greenburg, dressmaker, at 287 Broadway, was dismissed yesterday by the Senior Consul's Assessor, Mr. Ivanoff, yesterday. The case was an echo of one which was brought by Mrs. Greenburg against the defendant's sister, Mrs. W. Jones, who is a British subject, in the British Police Court a few days ago. The charge was also dismissed in that instance. The complainant testified that the two women came to her dressmaking shop and quarrelled about a dress, the defendant then assaulting her and scratching her face, while the sister bit witness's finger. The defendant denied assaulting the complainant but declared that the latter assaulted her, after first charging her with being too intimate with complainant's husband.

In order that he may be able to support an aged father, living in Tientsin, sentence was suspended by the Mixed Court yesterday in the case of a Chinese detective who was given a two years' term of imprisonment last August for accepting a bribe of $100 from a man who wished to evade arrest. The application was made by Mr. Reader Harris, who cited the prisoner's previous good record and stated that there was a position open to him.

WHO IS THE GUILTY MAN ?

Hunan Self-Government Is Demanded By People

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, January 20, 1921.—The question of drafting the provincial self-government system for the province of Hunan was taken up by General Chao Heng-ti, Commander-in-Chief, and Mr. Lin Tzu-yu, Civil Governor of Changsha, at a recent meeting where more than 40 representatives of over 20 local organisations of Changsha were present. A Self-Government Preparation Committee was accordingly named to replace the Hunan Provincial Assembly.

In spite of rumors of the killing of Lin Tzu-yu, Civil Governor, by General Chao Heng-ti in a recent dispute, Mr. Lin, according to the latest information, is still living. Furthermore, he is not only against Chen Chien, with whom he was alleged to be in league plotting against Chao Heng-ti, but also co-operating in harmony with General Chao in carrying on the Hunan government.

CHAO AGAINST NORTH

At the above meeting, General Chao explained the necessity of working out an adequate system of self-government in Hunan in order that other provinces in the country will adopt a similar system. He also formally denied the news that is gaining ground in the country relative to the resumption of allegiance and loyalty of Hunan to the Peking government. He emphatically urged upon the delegates representing various circles in Changsha of the importance of averting the danger of inviting northern militarists to tyranise the province again.

But it is reported in HanKow that secret negotiations relative to Hunan going over to the Peking administration are well under way. Some of the peace terms are reported as follows: Peking shall give Hunan military subsidy every month, General Chao Heng-ti and General Tan Yen-kai shall be appointed Military and Civil Governor of Hunan respectively, and only the troops of General Wu Pei-fu shall be allowed to guard the Wuchang-Changsha Railway line.

Whether there is any truth in the above report or not nothing can be said at present. The possibility is that the Peking government is making efforts to regain the loyalty of Hunan through mediations of General Wang Chuan-yuan, Inspector-General of Hupeh and Hunan.

U.S. Cancels Post For China Cotton Exports

An announcement of vital interest to exporting companies in China has just been received by the United States Postal authorities here. The announcement touches cotton exports from this country.

It states that not only raw cotton but cotton waste, cotton thread waste, card waste, card strips, willowed fly, willowed picker, picker, or blowings and chum, and cotton waste in any other form, or under any other trade designation, is prohibited entry into the United States by post. If parcels are sent in violation of this regulation they will be siezed by the Customs authorities.

Weisbrod Concert To Be At Town Hall

Mischa Weisbrod, the thirteen-year-old violinist, will give his farewell concert here at the Town Hall next Saturday night. Booking is open at Moutrie's and the management has announced that the concert will be at popular prices, all seats selling at two dollars.

In his first two concerts here the boy—and he is a mere youth—has made a marked impression. He plays even the most difficult concertos with ease and his execution is little short of marvellous. Weisbrod came here after two years of acute suffering in Siberia. He was unable to practice during this time and even now is without music, playing all his pieces from memory.

At his second performance he scored such a success that for some four minutes after he had finished his final number the audience applauded and finally left the theater with reluctance. The conclusion of each piece was marked by applause which lasted until his next number started.

London "Shanghaied"!

Dramatic critics in London will receive a shock when they hear that Shanghai has put one over on them in the matter of premiere theatrical critiques, and can also keep pace with them in the matter of up-to-date productions.

Not only is Shanghai to witness the phenomenal success "Brown Sugar" which is running contemporanecusly at the Garrick Theater, but will also witness the original production of the new play, "The Last Act," before its presentation in either London or New York. Added to which, the authors themselves will be seen in the play when it is presented here by the London comedy company, which Mr. Edgar Warwick has recently brought out.

"The Last Act" is to be presented in London shortly by the famous actor-manager, Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, and in New York by Mr. E. A. Brady, both having acquired the respective rights from the authors. Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe-Mayne who are at present playing with the Warwick Comedy Company, which is due to open here the first week in February at the Lyceum Theater.

FRANCE FREE OF BOLSHEVIK TAINT

American Relief Steadies People In Devastated Areas, Says Bangs

WRITER TELLS RESULTS

Declares Aid Must Be Continued To Restore Sufferers To Full Vigor

New York, Dec. 5.—Bolshevism will never take root in the miles of ruins along the Aisne as long as the morale of the French is kept high while the people are rebuilding and replanting, asserts John Keudrick Bangs. It is better to build up a human soul than to restore a ruined chateau, the well-known writer and lecturer optimises.

Speaking from observations made in two trips of inspection through the regions which remain almost as wrecked and desolated as the Germans left them, he declares the work done by the American Committee for Devastated France to be most important in readying the population during the reconstruction period.

FEARS WOULD BE ALLAYED

"In restless times like these," said Mr. Bangs, "when the great bogey of Bolshevism is being reared everywhere to frighten the timid into all sorts of compromises with conscience, I sometimes wish that every influential actor in America could be transported to Europe to see for themselves exactly how matters stand over there. I think a great many of their fears would be allayed, and that they would find that Bolshevism is to be apprehended only where there exist no standards of any sort by which the poor and ignorant can measure its shortcomings.

"That it should succeed in Russia is easily accounted for by the utter illiteracy of over 90 per cent of the population.

"If there were any real fear of Bolshevism temporarily triumphant outside of Russia we might with greater reason look for it in countries so devastated by war as to leave their peoples in a state of hopeless despair, and it is to the relief of those rather than to that of the unscarred that we should turn our attention, carrying to them not only material relief, but that moral support for which civilisation is supposed to stand.

"I must admit that as I traversed the devastated regions of France and Belgium in my two visits to the war area, and looked upon the ruin there, and realised the full measure of the suffering inflicted upon millions of innocent people by the wild forays of the Hun, it seemed to me that any one of these millions of sufferers would be perfectly justified in turning away from old systems, and trying anything new that came along, no matter how idiotic or insane it might be so long as it promised something different from that which was.

NO SUCH WEAKNESS THERE

"Had I been one of those returning refugees into any one of the hundred and more villages cared for by the American Committee for Devastated France, for instance, I am not sure that I should not have hoisted the red flag, not that I believed in any of the social absurdities for which it stands, but that it had the virtue at least of being different from the one I had used to reverence. But to my amazement I found no trace of any such weakness in the hearts of those good people in the Department of the Aisne.

"They looked with cold, dumb, brief upon the wreckage that had once been home, but the flag they raised above them was not the red flag of despair, but the tri-color of hope, and I am proud to say that in one corner of it was a blue field holding forty-eight stars. They knew that that flag had waved gallantly at Cantigny, at Chateau-Thierry, at St. Mihiel, and in the Argonne and that there it had meant force, but here it stood for sympathy and moral support, and it held them proof against any despairing urge of resentment against a civilisation that had superficially seemed to fail them. Indeed it was proof that that civilisation was going to see them safely through the charred aftermath of war.

NEED SPIRIT OF SYMPATHY

"For the material things there is still great need, but the need for the friendly hand, the word of comfort, in short for the spirit of sympathy, is even greater.

"The work of rehabilitation must precede the work of reconstruction. It is this sort of thing that the American Committee for Devastated France is doing. It is wooing weakling children back to health and strength. It is relieving the dreariness of the lives of the elders of the community. It is bringing about a solidarity among the youth from whose benefits the civilisation of the future is bound to profit. An ideal of America is being instilled in their hearts.

"This sort of thing must not be withdrawn as yet from those suffering people. They have not yet reached the shores of safety. America still has work to do to lift the fallen to their feet, and woo them back to the full vigor of their former health.

"I have no fear of the Bolshevist among peoples capable of thinking intelligently, but just as I insure my house against the fire that I do not apprehend, so do I believe in building up the strongest possible protection against the fires of the Reds. The way to do that is to deprive the fires of the Reds of all possible sources of fuel supply."

Stolen 'Gypsy' Princess Finds Father After Seven Years

Stolen from her home near Norfolk, Va., seven years ago, Rosa Miguel, now nineteen, saw her father for the first time since she disappeared from her home when, with a squad of detectives, he raided a gypsy camp near Phoenix, Ariz., where the girl was held captive. Her father, Eli Miguel, spent the long seven years and a fortune looking for his daughter. She was only twelve when kidnapped and forced to become the wife of the son of the king of the gypsy tribe. With a squad of armed men her father led the raid on the camp and rescued Rosa and arrested all the male members of the tribe.

Americans Will Study Status Of Ex-German Isles

(U. S. Naval Radio through Reuter)

Washington, Jan. 20.—The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate has decided to undertake a special study of the political strategic position on the Pacific, which will embrace the status of Yap and the other ex-German islands north of the equator and the question of the ex-German cables at Yap.

Senator Lodge, its chairman, has already conferred with the Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Davis, who will appear before the Committee and communicate to it the contents of all the various unpublished documents drawn up in Paris by the conferences there.

The Committee will probably investigate afresh the Shantung question and that of the Japanese occupation of Vladivostok and Saghalin. The Korean Border Commission is understood to have consented to lay the official records before the Committee, which is specially anxious to obtain a report of the General Board of the Navy, warning President Wilson against permitting the Japanese to obtain possession of the islands.

Senator Lodge and his colleagues are also curious as to whether the alleged secret treaty of 1917 may interfere with America's having cable and radio stations at Yap. They say that all they are able to learn from President Wilson is that he had made a reservation regarding Yap and obtained an oral agreement that the Island should be disposed of by the International Communications Congress, which has not yet been able to arrive at an agreement.

THE TRADE MARK OF RELIABLE

OAK

IS THE BEST TOO GOOD FOR YOU?

No! And the sooner you realise that OAK is the one perfect wood for FLOORING, PANELLING, WAINSCOTING and all INTERIOR DECORATIONS, better.

The cost is not prohibitive, in fact it runs about the same as a first class carpet.

The arguments in favour of OAK are quite unanswerable; durability, cost, and last but by no means least, HYGIENE.

Insist that all lumber for flooring and panelling for interior work bears the "Three Pines" Trade Mark, and the letters "KD" signifying kiln-dried, thus ensuring its perfect quality, and suitability for the severe climatic conditions of China.

We give all orders personal attention. After you have placed your order with us, the flooring will be laid and all work carried out under the personal supervision of a foreign expert of the Company. We prefer to do this for you.

GERMAN LAND PARTY NOW USES FAMINE THREAT

Organising To Starve Out Cities In Case Of Proletarian Uprisings

UNEMPLOYED MEN IN ROW

Invade Meeting Of Berlin Communist Shop Councilors And Demand Support

New York, Dec. 12.—What German Socialist and Liberal newspapers classify as an auxiliary of the "Orgesch," the illegal organisation of armed men being maintained and extended in Bavaria and some other parts of the country by the reactionary forces, is being formed in Prussia under the name of "The Country Trade Union," according to secret circulars which have come into possession of the Berlin Vorwarts. The alleged aim of the new organisation is to maintain peace and order, and its program shows that it plans to starve the inhabitants of the cities into submission to the will of the agrarians, if necessary. One paragraph of this program reads:

"The impulse of self-preservation has forced the agricultural interests to form a counterorganisation, also along trade union lines, with the object of maintaining that peace and order which are absolutely necessary for the prosperity and progress of agriculture and of protecting the Constitution against the dictatorship of the proletariat, regardless of whether this dictatorship be exercised through the Workers' Councils or through an auxiliary government by the trade unions. The agriculturists will make this protection effective in such a way that in cases involving a general strike of the workers, an unconstitutional intervention in the nation's economic life, near-revolts or the setting up of a Soviet regime, no foodstuffs will be delivered until order, peace and the Constitution have been restored. If such a proceeding should lead to an attempt to rob the farmers of their foodstuffs by violence, the Country Trade Union, which is already backed up by 700,000 farm owners in the German nation, believes itself strong enough to be able to defend its members against attacks of all kinds."

The appeal for members is signed by some of the most prominent Junkers in the Brandenberg district, where it was launched, including the officers of several local organisations of various agrarian and peasant proprietory societies. Each member is to pay an initiation fee of 5 marks for each "morgen" (two-thirds of an acre) of tillable land owned by him and 2½ marks for each "morgen" of forest. Non-members are reminded that they need not count upon the help of the Country Trade Union in case of trouble.

While the communist members of the Shop Councils of Berlin were holding a meeting on Nov. 14 in the Sport Palace and discussing the best methods of taking possession of the country's industries, the hall was invaded by a couple of hundred unemployed workers, coming from a convention of the unemployed being held in another part of the city, and a lively row took place, according to reports found in the German newspapers. The unemployed men demanded that the shop Councils do something practical for them and support their demand that the Government either furnish them with work or assure them allowances large enough to sustain them in something like comfort. Some of the communists regarded the invasion of the hall as a sort of insult and wanted the unemployed deputation put out. Then the trouble began and pandemonium reigned for a time. Finally Herr Schluter, the leader of the unemployed, succeeded in making himself heard, and he told the communist councilors that unless the persons now at work made common cause with the unemployed the latter would go to the employers and offer to work cheaper, even if that would be fratricidal strife. This threat increased the rage of the communists and the tumult became so great that the meeting had to be adjourned. The battle was continued in the street and the police finally intervened and arrested several of the combatants. The next day both sides expressed regret at the occurrence and agreed to support each other in the struggle for the "dictatorship of the proletariat."

Incensed by the unfavorable attitude of the German Government toward the proposed socialisation of the nation's mines, the Executive Committee of the miners' union sent a letter to Chancellor Fehrenbach on Nov. 18 demanding that he issue a statement clearly defining the stand he purposed to take in the matter. In this letter the miners' officials condemn the Hugo Stinnes plan for trustifying the mining industry still further and giving the workers a chance to be small stockholders as nothing but camouflage employed by the mine owners and the National Economic Council to deceive the masses and to reserve the private ownership of the mines, despite all the promises to the contrary made by the Government to the men when it wanted them to speed up production so the terms of the Spa agreement could be complied with and the 2,000,000 tons of coal a month be turned over to the Allies promptly.

In accordance with an order issued by the Prussian Government the State employes began to enjoy a forty-eight-hour work week on Nov. 15. The principle of the eight-hour day is also recognised, but necessary and urgent work must be finished as soon as possible, regardless of this principle.

Revised figures on the result of the elections for the Saxon Diet held Nov. 14 show that, although the Red parties suffered heavy losses at the polls, they still outnumbered their bourgeois opponents, both in the popular vote and in the number of Deputies. The total Socialist and communist vote was 1,029,083, of which the Majority Socialists got 573,131, with 27 Deputies; the Independent Socialists 281,335, with 13 Deputies; the New Communists 58,770, with 3 Deputies, and the Communists 115,857, with 6 Deputies. The 1,011,108 votes cast for the bourgeois parties were divided as follows: Nationalists, 439,863, with 20 Deputies; People's Party, 381,684, with 18 Deputies; democrats, 158,194, with 8 Deputies; Centrists, 22,894, with 1 Deputy, and Economic Unionists, 17,473. The combined Red and "Pink" Deputies number 49, against 47 bourgeois members.

At the fourth national convention of the National Association of Ex-Prisoners of War held in Hanover on Nov. 13 and 14, many of the delegates voiced bitter sentiments toward the German Government for its failure to settle up the back pay due several thousands of the ex-prisoners, but a resolution was adopted which, while emphasising the fact that the convention stood by the demand for payment of the money due, still, in view of the financial difficulties of the country it was willing to have the claims adjusted according to the social needs of the individuals and the nation as a whole. Director Schlesinger of the National Central Office for Military and Civilian Prisoners, informed the convention that some 80,000 prisoners had been brought back from Siberia by way of the Baltic Sea and 5,537 by the Far Eastern route during the preceding six months. It cost 50,000 marks to transport a man home via Vladivostok, and altogether the Government had spent 1,200,000,000 marks for transportation.

Wilkins Brothers Case Gets Hearing

Preliminary Statements Made By Attorneys In French Mixed Court

Preliminary statements by attorneys were heard yesterday in the French Mixed Court in connection with the charge of theft that has been made by Wilkins Brothers against B. Stransky, who is accused of hatching a plot to seize a considerable portion of the company's export business by means of contracts he is alleged to have stolen after he ceased to be manager of Wilkins Brothers' import department.

Involved in the case are two Chinese, T. S. King and D. T. Wong against whom charges have also been made by Wilkins Brothers. Mr. D'Auxion de Ruffe is appearing for Wilkins Brothers in the litigation and Mr. J. Em. Lemiere for Stransky.

In the course of yesterday's brief proceedings in reply to the charge Mr. Lemiere made a counter claim for his client against Wilkins Brothers for commissions alleged to be due on business done and he contended also that contracts that were found in the possession of the Kings Trading Company, which was formed by Stransky after he left Wilkins Brothers were the property of Stransky and not of Wilkins Brothers.

The taking of testimony in the cases is to be started in the French Mixed Court next Wednesday morning.

COLLEGE ROW IN WEST GETS MORE SERIOUS

Break In Conference Football Relations Spreads To Other Sports

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Two of the breaks brought about yesterday in the football relations between traditional rivals in the Western Conference have extended into other branches of sport. It became known tonight when the "Big" Wisconsin and Ohio State, which severed their football relations yesterday after an argument as to where a proposed 1921 game should be played, have not scheduled games with each other on the diamond, and neither have Minnesota and Illinois, another pair to discontinue their annual football game.

Michigan and Chicago, however, will meet on the diamond despite the failure to arrange a football game, and Chicago's resumption of athletic relations with Northwestern was given a wider scope when these two scheduled baseball games.

Ohio State thus far has the smallest number of games on its schedule, while Michigan leads. Ohio State has arranged only eight contests, while Michigan has seventeen, although all are not with conference teams.

Colored Grid Team Lost One Game In 20 Years

The end of the 1920 football season found one Southern college with a record of only one defeat in twenty years.

Morehouse College, a negro institution, lost a game ten years ago, but for ten years prior to that time and since then the word "defeat" has been known at the school only as it applied to Moorehouse's opponents.

Moorehouse has played games annually with, the leading negro teams in the South, including Tuskegee Institute, Atlanta University and Morris Brown.

Snape Wins Competition For Benevolent Fund Prize

The eighteenth competition for the Benevolent Fund Shield was held yesterday at the Rifle Range from 7 to 9 a.m. Range Bisley 500 yards, one sighter and fifteen scoring shots. Two possibles were registered during the competition, by F. W. Snape and R. I. Ito. The former won in the count out eleven central bulls out of fifteen. There were only 12 entries.

Following are the results:

Names	Class	Score	Allowce	Total	Points
W. Snape	"A1"	75	0	75	10
I. Ito	"A1"	75	0	75	9
T. Rose	"A1"	73	0	73	8

Airplane Drops Football To Start Soccer Game

A novel kick-off was witnessed at an international football match which took place in Vienna recently between Austria and Hungary.

Both teams were lined up, ready for the start, but it was noticed they had no ball. An airplane, however, suddenly appeared on the horizon, hovered over the playing field for a short time and then, to the huge delight of some 50,000 onlookers, slowly glided down until it was sixty feet above the center. Then the pilot dropped a football, and as soon as the ball touched the referee's whistle sounded and the match was on.

Having got rid of its bomb, the airplane mounted again and made off amid the cheers and laughter of the crowd. Austria won by two goals to one.

The Shanghai Harriers Club will hold a training run this afternoon, the start being from the Shanghai American School, North Szechuen Road, at 3 o'clock sharp. There will be two packs, fast and slow, and the run will be over the Kiangwan country.

At a meeting of the Club Committee Thursday night the following were elected to form the Handicapping Committee: Mr. W. W. Bartlett, M. C. C. Reneman and Mr. T. McKenna.

REMEDIOS IS BADLY BEATEN BY FASTING

Dreary Billiards Match In Championship Tourney Ends 750 To 518

MEETS PRINCE NEXT

But Last Night's Winner Must Show More Stuff; Second Round Now

E. F. Fasting easily defeated G. M. P. Remedios last night at the American Club in the open amateur billiard championship tournament and earned the honor of meeting J. W. Prince in the second round. Prince defeated Gordon Morriss Wednesday night. Fasting won from Remedios by a score of 750 to 518.

The second round must be played before next Saturday and its conclusion will give local billiard enthusiasts a line on the opponent of C. W. Porter, the present champion.

Porter is to play Campos in the second round. Other games are E. D. Bush vs. F. P. da Silva, a very important match now that Remedios and Morriss are out of the running, and G. B Stormes vs. R. P. Phillips. Philips is a former champion and one of the best billiard players in Shanghai and may pull a little surprise party which might have bearing on the 1921 title.

REMEDIOS IS OFF

Last night's game between Fasting and Remedios was not easy to watch. The winner did not appear to exert himself and Remedios was away off. The first 500 points took over two hours and there was nothing spectacular.

Once in the first 500 points Fasting stepped out. He aggregated a break of 51 after having previously recorded 32 and 30 a his best mark. Remedios did not do better than 31 in the match.

Seldom has such a poor game been seen in a championship tournament here. Breaks of two and four were common, indeed and time and again both player did not even score.

LONG DREARY GAME

And at that Fasting had an average of 7 while Remedios average was but 4.9. The latter was clearly off in his shooting and he is really capable of better billiards. Many of the wise ones had him figured to oppose Porter in the final but the dope was shattered last night.

Fasting can do better than 750 points in two hours and 35 minutes but must improve a great deal if he hopes to touch Prince for the latter is going like a house afire this season.

PENN NOT TO PLAY NAVY

The University of Pennsylvania football team will not have the Navy on its 1921 schedule, Wharton Sinkler, chairman of the football committee has announced. There has been considerable discussion of such a contest, but Coach Heisman is opposed to making the schedule any harder than it a was this year. The last time the Red and Blue team clashed with the middies was in 1916, when the score resulted in a 7-7 tie. Pennsylvania's schedule has not yet been announced.

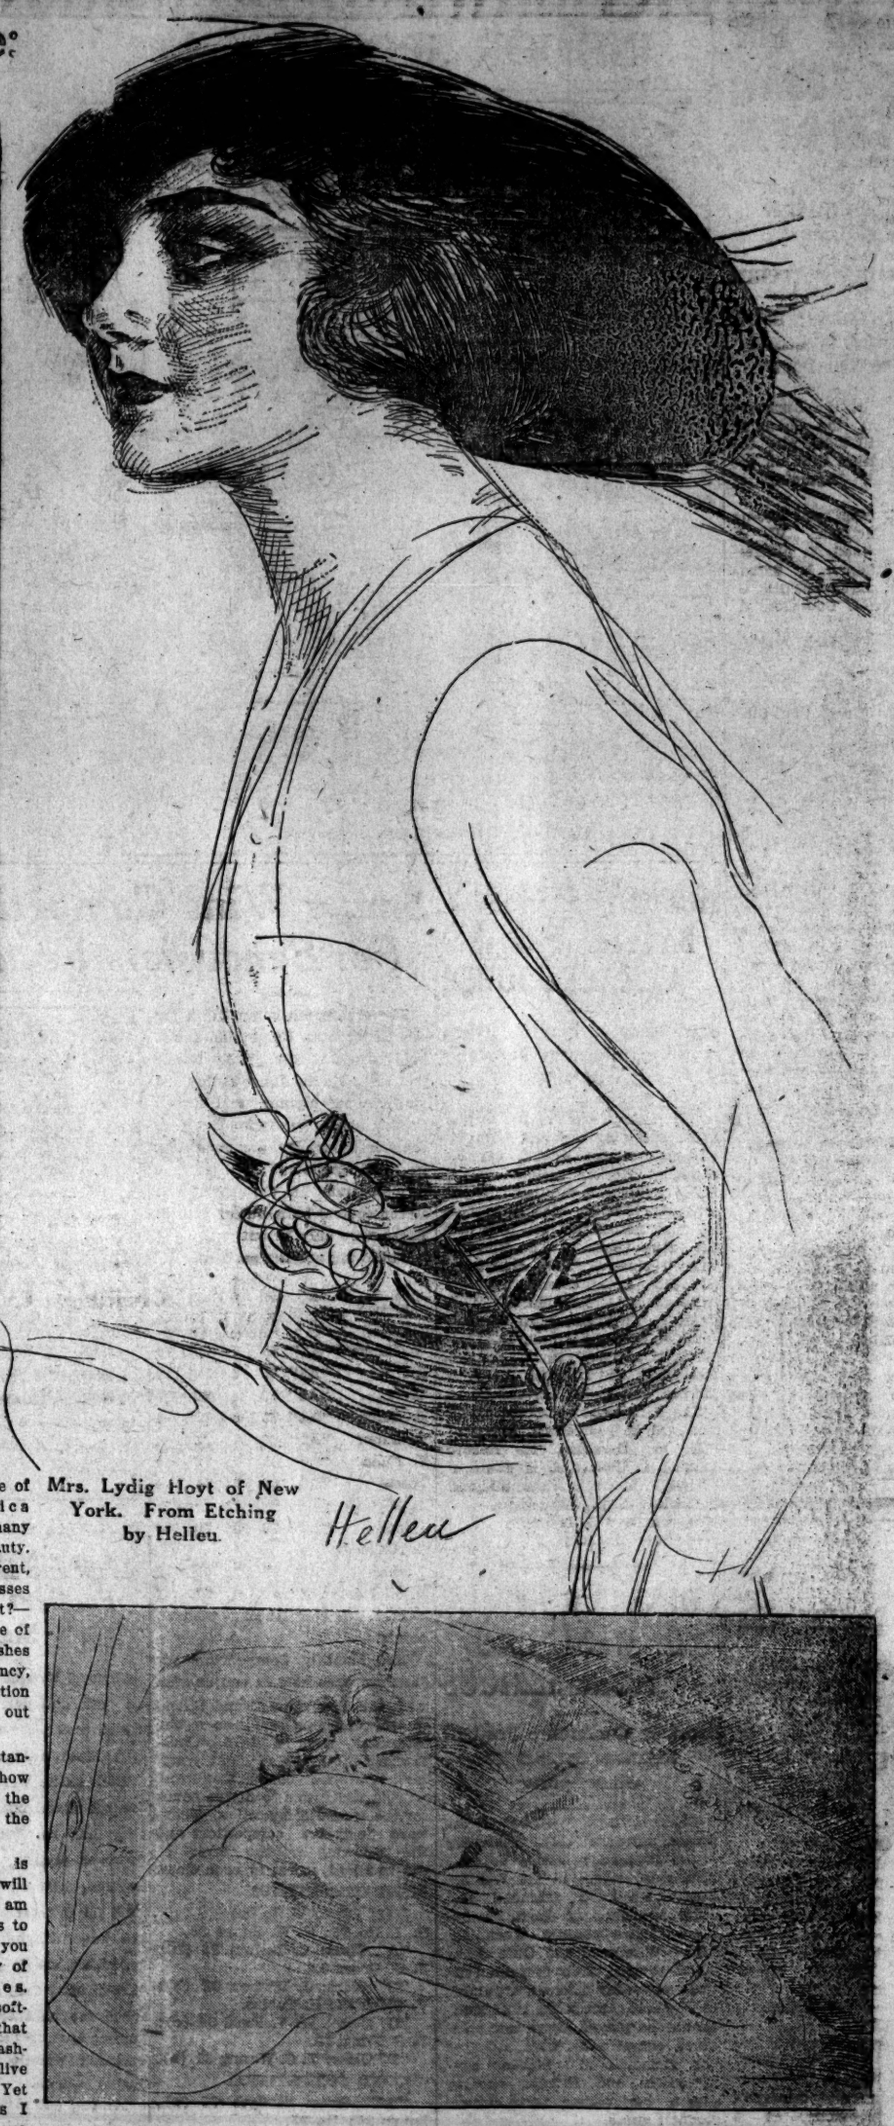
M. Helleu, Famous Etcher of Beautiful Women, Explains What Beauty Is

"I Will Not Paint Ugly Women, They Bore Me: Nor Actresses, They Are Artificial"



The Duchess of Marlborough Who Was Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt—By Helleu.

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt of New York. From Etching by Helleu.

MONSIEUR PAUL HELLEU, the distinguished portrait etcher of the world's most beautiful women, is now in New York surveying the field of feminine beauty among the 110,000,000 Americans. But he will paint very few American women.

"I will not paint ugly women, they bore me; I will not make portraits of actresses, they are artificial!" M. Helleu declared.

"But what is beauty?" the artist was asked.

"Ah! Who can analyze the beauty of a pretty woman?" he exclaimed in a tone of reverence. "But the heart knows. I trust it. When a girl comes to me, begs me to make her portrait, let her be gowned to the envy of all womanhood, and clever, chic, completely fascinating—if my heart says no, I refuse to make her portrait.

"I will not paint an ugly woman. It is not worth while. Only the beautiful is worth while in this world."

"But actresses, many of them, are beautiful," the reporter insisted.

"Beautiful in the outward semblances of beauty as the world values what it regards as beauty, but it is hollow, it is artificial, it is destroyed by unnaturalness.

"You see," continued the artist, with great earnestness, "the actress learns a trade of artifices, her life becomes a continual make-believe—and finally she loses the priceless charm of spontaneity, sincerity, sweet naturalness. Without naturalness there is no beauty, so the actress has for me not the slightest appeal. I must beg her to excuse me.

"Naturalness is the keynote. If I find it lacking my heart refuses to respond to my work and I cannot endure to paint her. A woman of the underworld, an actress, even a woman in politics, pure as gold, perhaps, but keeping an habitual pose for a purpose, loses her naturalness. Her pretenses petrify me. My heart grows cold, the cold creeps to my fingers and freezes them, and how can a man use the dry point with a cold heart and numbed hands?

"The chorus girl only follows in the footsteps of the actress. She is an impostor—her beauty is a mask that does not tell us the truth about herself. Poor girl, she is seeking for perfection in a way that will never find it. There are many women not on the stage in the same sad state—they do not know that their claims to beauty are false. Their failure lies in acting a part instead of being themselves. It is a great reproach.

"Someone told me of the remark by one of your most conspicuous social leaders, a very admirable woman. She said that after a reception at her residence in the early morning hours as she was preparing to go to bed she happened to glance in the mirror in her boudoir and was startled to see that her face was wearing a fixed and artificial smile. Through the hours of the entertainment and from long custom she had put on and wore without knowing it this artificial smile. She was playing a part.

"But the sincere woman—she is, shall I say, half way on the road to beauty. Tall or short, blonde or brunette, slim or plump; there is no type of beauty as such. Women are beautiful because they are beautiful. They leave me breathless. Their scintillating eye-thrusts blind me; their betraying radiances warn me here again is beauty. The eye can tell, can penetrate the mask of artificiality and so inform the heart."

"But cannot a woman strive to be beautiful, is there nothing within reach of feminine ingenuity which will assist in realizing the one great hope and dream of womankind?" the reporter queried.

"Ah, yes, something can be accomplished," M. Helleu admitted, but at once exclaimed: "But usually the efforts are made in directions which are hopeless. Many women passionately desire to be rich, not for mere greed or stupid wish or ostentation. They want money to adorn themselves lavishly, thinking that they can then win to beauty, which is every woman's birthright. That thought saddens me.

"Jean Jacques Rousseau once said: 'Riches are progress—and progress is worthless.' It is hard for a woman to be both rich and beautiful, for clothes do not make the woman. I would gladly make the portrait of a beautiful but ragged peasant girl. But the rich woman whose seeming beauty lies really in her clothes—adieu, madame!

Miss Maxwell, "An American Beauty."—By Helleu.

"So you see how I feel about riches. Wealth does not interest me for others or for myself. My friends say that I might be wealthy, that I have only to accept the sitters with the fat check books. I laugh and remain poor, but I love my work. I etch the portraits that appeal to me; for true art and riches will not pair.

"But there is one thing that a woman can do to add to her beauty without acquiring artificiality. Just as education and culture do not injure the soul or impair naturalness, so cultivation of expression and manner does not necessarily make for artificiality. But it must suit the person. Here is Madame Menier, a Greek profile, a blonde cameo, with a twinkle in the eye. Here is my oldest daughter, a melancholy glance, but is she not dark and lovely? And here is Queen Alexandria. Was she not a beauty! You note the steely, sea-gray eyes. The eyes of a kind but dominating race. Some of my drawings, you see, are tinted in faint color and in some the effect of color is conveyed by black and white line. The eyes and hair give a suggestion of the complexion, ivory, rose, waxen or snowy, as the case may be. Look at the drawings—they are beautiful because my models were beautiful. But I am catholic in taste, not narrow. Let them be sad or gay, slim or plump, when they touch the heart they are beautiful, and it is only then that I will make their portraits.

"I am here in your country not to paint what you call 'society women.' I have painted some of your society women and I have painted the nobility and titled women of England and France. But I am not a snob. It is only their beauty that I regard. I see your beauties everywhere. They are miraculous. Fifth avenue is a kaleidoscope of beauty.

"The other night at the Ritz Whitney Warren and one of your greatest artists and myself had dinner. What more could man ask?—a good bottle of wine, a well-made salad, roast chicken, two firm friends and beauty all around us! At the neighboring tables at least twenty pretty girls! I should have liked to draw them all, and I told my companions so."

M. Helleu paused as if recalling to his mind that pleasant dinner and those surrounding beauties, and then continued:

"One of my friends at another table was dining with a little blonde. Her name, that I cannot give, but she was charming, quite charming. She comes to-day to pose and I shall give her the portrait. I agreed to that with the permission of her escort.

"You ask about English girls. Yes, they, too, are charming. Not very well dressed, perhaps, but most charming. And the Englishman of means is well groomed, a splendid creature—but his wife; well, she is not so splendid. The French are vivacious, pretty and very chic. Ah, you cannot get me to say anything about my countrywomen except that they are entirely adorable. But the American girl! When, as I demand, she is natural, she is equally adorable and something more. The melange of races in America makes for so many types of true beauty. Each one is different, and each one possesses—how shall I put it?—a true touch, a trace of oddity that astonishes and arrests my fancy, piques my admiration and my heart goes out to them."

"What is the standard of beauty, how would you analyze the points of beauty?" the reporter asked.

"Your question is most difficult. I will not deny that I am sometimes at a loss to analyze and tell you wherein the beauty of an individual lies. 'How,' I exclaimed softly to myself, 'can that girl there with the ash-blonde hair and olive skin allure me?' Yet she does. And, as I have said, I have learned to trust my heart. A girl with the shoulders of a boy, the ankles of a gazelle, and the smile of a miss in rompers, as she passes, I marvel at these incongruities, but acknowledge, as I must, her fascination.

"No there is no definite standard of beauty. It is not like the rules of mathematics which hold true the world over, nor like the formulas of the chemist which must always be the same for all ages and all races if the predicted reaction in the test tube is to be accomplished. I am now speaking not from the true artist's point of view—for few are artists.

"Morality has been said to be a matter of geography. And so is beauty. The savages who admire a woman with gaudily painted face or blackened teeth have their standards of beauty—popular standards of course I mean. The Turk admires what you call plumpness. And I dare say the Eskimo has standards of beauty of his own. There has for centuries, as we all know, been the unsettled popular controversy as to whether the blonde or the brunette represents the highest type of beauty.

"That there is no real standard by which to measure beauty is easy to realize when you contemplate the wives of your friends and acquaintances. Each no doubt sees beauty in the woman he chose—but can you see it? To him his wife is or, at least was, beautiful. And yet the artistic eye instantly penetrates, perhaps, the artificiality and the self-consciousness which to him makes for beauty but to the artist disillusions.

Madam Helleu in an Odd Etching Made by Her Husband.

"Let me see," said the artist, as if searching his mind for something, and then continued: "If you are fond of pearls I think I can explain my meaning. A dear friend of mine in Paris has a notable collection of them, pearls of all shapes and sizes, pearls of many colors—and all are beautiful. The black and pink add lustre to each other, the pear shaped and the perfect sphere; she loves them all, as I can well understand. But beyond this, and most important, we do not forget that there is one charm which all possess in common, none is spurious, all are genuine. I cannot help thinking that the beauty of women is like that—it is indeed a pearl. It varies in an infinite measure, but I demand that pearl or woman, each must be genuine!"

HOW DIAMONDS ARE CUT AND MADE INTO GEMS

Method Of Converting The Rough Stones Into Brilliants Told By Museum's Expert

THE WAR PUT PRICES UP

But They Are Being Bought And Displayed More Than Ever Before

New York, December 12.—Diamonds as coveted gems and ornaments have lost none of their popularity. Since the late war many persons who never possessed these brilliants are wearing them today, even though they cost more than formerly. Few persons realise the skill it takes to cut and polish diamonds for the market.

"Diamonds as they are found in the rough state," Herbert P. Whitlock, curator of the department of mineralogy at the Museum of Natural History, said, "are not impressive. They have none of the magical flashes of light which in the polished stone makes them unique among the noble family of gems. And it is here that a goodly part of the price of diamonds is accumulated. For the art of turning a rough diamond into a polished brilliant is a long process requiring a superlative degree of skill. There is no better way to appreciate this than to follow the diamond from the mine to the jeweler and see for ourselves just what happens to it.

"When the diamonds are recovered from the mine they are not by any means all of them clear and colorless, as a self-respecting diamond should be; indeed, only about 25 percent of the stones found are without some faint color. Of the remainder, about one-third are of light shade of color, such as violet, yellow or brown, and are known as 'off color' stones. The remainder, roughly one-half of the total find, are more or less deeply colored and are consequently of no value for jewelry, although still usable for diamond cutting and polishing or for facings for rock drills.

"So we find that at the beginning of its travels the diamond is introduced to the sorter. The sorter is a kind of super-expert on diamonds, whose eye has been trained through years of practice to detect the slightest variations in color of diamonds and to find flaws in the stones with an ease which is little less than uncanny. Safeguarded behind a heavy metal screen, the diamond appraiser sits with a pile of rough stones before him, judging each stone and assigning it to its proper place.

SORTING THE DIAMONDS

"The first consideration in sorting diamonds is the adaptability of the stone for cutting. Let us assume that the stone whose travels we are following is sorted into the grade known as 'close goods,' comprising completed flawless crystals from which fair-sized brilliants can be cut, or, to use the trade term, 'made.' These usually have eight sides or faces triangular in shape. Next comes a re-sorting of the 'close goods' into eight grades ranging from blue white, which comprises the finest quality stones, to yellow and brown, which are so badly off color as to be unfit for gems.

"If our stone has passed the critical test of the sorter and is placed in one of the higher grades, it is weighed, wrapped up in a parcel with others of its kind, a price per carat is assigned to it and it is sold to a diamond dealer and ultimately finds its way to the workshop of the diamond polisher. Here at the hands of a highly skilled workman it is destined to be turned into a gem fit to grace beauty or opulence.

"Most of this is done in Holland, and especially in Amsterdam, which, since the fifteenth century has been famous for this industry, which is in reality an art, but there are nevertheless, a number of shops in operation right here in our city. Like many other operators who depend for their success on a high degree of manual skill, the diamond cutter has few tools, and these are relatively primitive and have changed little since the days of Louis de Bequem, who cut diamonds in 1475. The lapidary depends, like the violin player on the delicacy of his touch, and like the painter on the accuracy of his eye, and scorns to use complex mechanical devices to aid him in his difficult task.

"The surface irregularities, together with any superficial flaws, are first split away from the stone. . . . Sometimes when the stone is large it is of advantage to saw it into two or more pieces so as to save as much as possible of the weight in cut diamonds. This is accomplished with a thin disc of bronze about four inches in diameter, revolving very rapidly and having its edge charged with diamond dust at the beginning of the sawing.

'BRUITING' THE STONES

"The rough shaping of the diamond is done through an operation called 'bruiting,' which consists of wearing away the corners by rubbing one stone against another. This was formerly a manual process, the two diamonds being mounted on sticks held in either hand by the lapidary. But even in the ancient and conservative art of diamond cutting some mechanical improvements have crept in, and now in most of the shops a rapidly twining spindle takes the place of one of the hand sticks. The remaining stick has grown in length to suit the modern method until it is now about two feet long, and can be firmly grasped with both hands, and held in a rest so that the diamond it bears at its end can be rubbed against its fellow which is spinning round in front of it.

"Having rough-shaped our diamond we now come to the finishing operation, the producing of the facets which give brilliancy and sparkle to it and which is technically known as polishing. The holder of the stone during the polishing consists of a small metal cup on a long stem which is called a dop, and much resembles a tulip. A solder composed of one part tin and three parts lead is placed in the dop and heated until soft. The diamond is then embedded in the solder with the portion of the stone on which the desired facet is to be cut placed uppermost and almost completely surrounded by the solder.

"When the diamond has been properly adjusted in the dop it is plunged into cool water to harden the solder. Such drastic treatment as this would cause less aristocratic stones to fly promptly to pieces, but not so with the diamond; the high heat conductivity of this remarkable substance permits it to submit to the sudden change of temperature without developing in it even the slightest flaw.

"The dop is now fastened by means of its stem in a heavy iron arm called the tongs, in such a position as to bring the position of the facet to be cut exactly undermost when it is placed in contact with the polishing wheel or lap. The latter is made of soft iron and turns at the rate of about 1,000 revolutions a minute. Several hours are required to cut one facet, then the stone is readjusted for another one, until all of the fifty-eight little facets in which lie the secret of its brilliancy are produced."

Open-Air Barber Shop For Paris Poor

An outdoor tonsorial parlor in Paris where those who cannot afford to patronise regular barber shops can get a haircut and shave. Here one may get a shave and haircut for fifty centimes, normally ten cents. CASTORIA for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."
J. E. SIMPSON, M. D., Chicago, Ill.

"A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."
J. S. ALEXANDER, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Have used your Castoria on various occasions in suitable cases and have found it a palatable and efficient laxative, especially in the various diseases of childhood."
CHAS. EDWARD GARDINER, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, and always obtain the desired result."
F. GERALD BLATTNER, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have prescribed Castoria to families for several years. It is all right. Mothers like it, for children will take it without any trouble."
C. A. WILSON, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."
J. A. BOARMAN, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

The New Model

WILLYS-KNIGHT

WITH THE FAMOUS SLEEVE-VALVE MOTOR

Sleeve-valves mean: silence, speed, economy, increased power, a minimum of carbon deposit, flexibility and simplicity. These are advantages which no motorist should ignore.

The Willys-Knight car is a beautiful acquisition. There are no crudities of design to jar one's sensibilities; there are no false economies in its construction.

When you have bought the Willys-Knight, 40 H. P. Touring Car, you have acquired the acme of perfection in motor design; the culminating point at which experts have arrived and challenged the world.

The tonneau and front compartments are roomy and luxurious, the upholstery being hand-buffed leather. The long wheel-base and cantilever springs absorb all the shocks resultant from an uneven road.

We do not want you to accept this without the evidence of your own senses, and we extend to you a cordial invitation to inspect this model for yourself.

SEEKS THE MAGIC DRUG OF AMAZON

Unique Goal Of A Group Of Scientists Whom Dr. Rusby Will Lead

BY JOHN FARRAR
(New York World)

From the mysterious jungles of South America there have come rumors of a strange and terrible drug, held sacred among isolated tribes of Indians. No white man has ever experienced the extraordinary sensations which legend claims it causes. It is one of the unveiled lures of that exotic country of flaming foliage and whirling cataracts. Now a group of Americans is starting into the wilds to find it. Other men have sough romance in world-wide quests for precious stones or in searching the whitening bones of prehistoric monsters; but there is a novelty in the quest for an unknown drug that piques the imagination.

In January Dr. H. H. Rusby, for many years dean of the Columbia School of Pharmacy, will lead a large expedition through Eastern Equador and Peru, and will uncover, it is expected, the truth about this curious drug. But that is by no means the only romantic investigation he will make in traversing a land into which few white men have ventured. He will penetrate into the thickets of the upper Amazon River basin, 1,000 square miles of which only one explorer has ever visited. There, the wild customs of Indian tribes will be seen and recorded, specimens of rubber, oil, flowers and animals will be gathered, and an attempt will be made to study the hideous malarial diseases that sometimes seize and make away with entire tribes in the lonely jungle country.

This expedition will be financed by the H. K. Mulford Company of Philadelphia; but the information secured will all be made public in elaborate reports. The Mulford Company are manufacturers of serums for various diseases, and the investigations of drugs and epidemics are simply to aid the general work in which they are interested.

The first stage of the proposed journey is from Bogota, down the Andes Mountains and the Guaviare River to the tiny settlement of Calamar.

It is the second lap, through the Uaupes River territory, that is likely to prove the most thrilling; for there no white man but Dr. Hamilton Rice has ever been. He it was who told of great crag-line valleys stretching out under mountain crests, over which terrific thunder storms brooded, where the mules were lost in sloughs and mud-holes; where the lush banks of the silvery llanos were peopled by red and white monkeys and fierce jaguars; where wild Indians threatened, and peaceful tribes were rotten with strange diseases. All varieties of insects made life a misery. There was the tucandere or congo, whose bite gives violent pain and a sickness that lasts for hours. There was the tabano or blood-sucking fly; and, in addition, swarms of ants, bees, wasps, spiders, centipedes, beetles, ticks, chiggers, and so on to the deadly snakes. Nor was all terror and annoyance. There was beauty, too. From one range to another, panoramic views of the lands beneath, threaded by rivers, some white, some dark with sediment, making a net-work of lighter colors spreading off toward the parent Amazon.

Occasionally a luxuriant palm would tower against the sky, a palm of curious variety, whose top would rocket out in bursting blossoms of shimmering yellow, or of lilac. Nor were the natives always unattractive. Along the Inridia, Guania and Icana Rivers, they live in strange barbarism. Later in the trip there had been the fearsome Carijonas who lash their enemies' bodies, and leave them to finish out life made hideous by livid scars. But here in the smaller river-valleys, the Indians were for the most part peaceful. True, they were polygamous, and addicted to the use of strange and terrible drugs; but their bodies were well developed, the hands and feet of the woman delicate and beautifully formed, and the ekeing out of existence made possible by quiet agriculture and some trading.

Yet, with all its beauties, this country has been most difficult for the explorer; for travel is almost impossible at times, and it is hard to carry provisions. The Rice expedition was at one time forced to live completely upon the resources of the country, and found monkey meat only too palatable.

It is to this country, ripe for adventure, that Dr. Rusby will take his group of scientists, and scour the lands and waters for specimens and curiosities. He does not expect difficulties. Yet any trip of this nature would be pale and was indeed did not certain excitements develop. It is the hazards that make exploration a lure.

"We expect to be gone until the end of 1921," Dr. Rusby told me, dropping the professional manner suddenly, to indulge himself in the enthusiasms of his plans.

The dean of the College of Pharmacy is a powerful man of middle age, with iron-gray hair, and a manner that is at once compelling and kindly. He strikes one as a leader. He has had much experience in exploring little known countries. His colorful adventures would fill many volumes. As far back as 1885 he was making expeditions. He has visited Colombia, Venezuela, Mexico—and, he will tell you, Arizona—for there was a time when Arizona was very nearly as wild and untamed as the region southwest of Bogota.

He turned from his work of signing letters, to pick an anecdote from his past journeys for me.

"Suppose I find something different for you, he suggested. "I might tell you of snakes, of fever of fights with natives; but instead I want to show you what simple natural difficulties the explorer has to combat, and how sometimes they reach the proportions of very real adventure.

"This, too, was in South America on the Beni River. There were five of us in one boat, with all our provisions. If we should upset, it meant certain death for all of us: for there was no way of getting more provisions, and in the dense jungle alongside were hostile natives, and worse. It was imperative that we follow the course of the river successfully.

"We were proceeding safely enough, when suddenly we heard the noise of a waterfall ahead. We were rushing toward it. There seemed nothing to prevent our being dashed over and onto the rocks beneath.

"We held our breaths and looked about at the dark jungle as if that would help us. From the sound of the falls ahead, we judged that it must be a drop of some seventeen or eighteen feet.

"Suddenly, as if by a miracle, the boat stuck on a rock, just above the falls. The water, fortunately, had been low. There we were, balanced. What were we to do. We could not turn back. We could not land. What would you have done? Think quickly now, you've only a minute. What would you have done?"

I was silent. Apparently I would have perished in the mad waters of the Beni.

"Two of us jumped out, one on each side of the boat. We extricated it from the rock. Below the water was deep and smooth. We took the craft slowly toward the waterfall, and let it drop with a resounding smash and spatter over the edge. Then, like a flash, we dove after it; for the current carried it swiftly down through the jungle aisles—and it took us some time to overtake it and scramble in with none of us any the worse, except for a generous wetting.

"Every trip has its adventures."

"As for our plans for the coming expedition, they are pretty elaborate. One of the things we intend to do is to look into the origin of known drugs. There are many products collected and sold by the natives of these regions, about which we know little or nothing.

Take, for example, copaibe, a liquid balsam used in the treatment of catarrhal inflammations We get, from these natives, six or eight different varieties of that drug. Each one is of a different quality, and they come from trees of different types. We intend to secure specimens of the different trees at varying seasons, and, by tests, to learn which is the best type, and what product results from the selection.

"Then, too, we will investigate the rubber situation, and gather specimens of rubber-yielding trees. The United States Bureau of Plant Industry is working in close harmony with us, and we hope to introduce the growing of some of these plants into our own territorial possessions.

"The questions of insects that carry disease is an important one. We intend not only to investigate the results of the bite of certain of these pests; but to test the efficacy of various scientific preparations to be used to protect the skin. We will find which drug protects from which insect. It will be a great help to future travellers. The Bureau of Entomology has made a list of these preparations for us, and will aid us in preparing them.

"Any one who has not travelled in South American jungles has no idea of the terrible work that these tiny beasts can do. When I was on the Gulf of the Orinoco years ago, life became a burden, for there was scarcely an hour of the night when we were not fighting off the terrific storm of flies and bugs of innumerable varieties and description-defying stings.

"The new drug may prove valuable, or it may prove simply a curiosity. It comes to us now only in the reports of travellers. To the natives who use it, the passion which it creates is sacred. They use it to inspire courage in battle, and the ceremony that accompanies the drinking is elaborate and strange. No man may take the drug alone. Chosen cup-bearers administer it. Should a woman take it, or watch the giving, she is killed. They say that the effects are violent and that a mad elation seizes participants in the orgy. The nearest comparison I can make to the effect would be hashish.

"There will, of course, be investigations of the various forms of malaria and other fevers, and a special study will be made of seed oils, frogs and other animals. On our return various noted scientists will be asked to examine our specimens and aid in forming our conclusion. Naturally, we are very hopeful and ambitious for the results of what seems to be a chance for accomplishing something for science."

Dr. Rusby is a man who does not let his years interfere with accomplishment. This will be the crowning achievement of a life of adventure and research. If he ever writes his memoirs, they will be more than worth reading.

Good luck go with you, Doctor, in your stranger pilgrimage.

New York Sees What The Blue Law Might Bring

A monster anti-blue law parade, depicting scenes of what is likely to happen if the Sunday blue law goes into effect was recently staged in New York by the International Sporting Club. The procession was composed of a band and floats, the floats presenting with true human characters, a sorrowful portrayal of the things expected to happen should the advocates of rigid blue law legislation be successful in their efforts to clamp the lid on the Sabbath. There were no marchers. The illustration "Punishment for Bowling on Sunday" was one of the many floats.

NOTICE

Butcheries both in the International and French Settlements hereby jointly notify the Public:

Shanghai Butchers usually purchase sheep and calves from the interior of China. In consequence of the recent famine and the high cost of food prices, labour and farm hands in the interior, the raising of cattle and sheep has become difficult, and therefore the supply of meat has decreased in comparision with that of previous years. The price of meat has risen to a much higher price above normal, say, an increase of about 5 to 6 cents per pound.

In spite of the difficulty and high cost of transportation of animals from the interior, and the high price of rice and other foods, Shanghai Butchers sell meat to their customers as cheaply as possible, with the intention of retaining their good connection with customers.

A meeting has been held by all Shanghai Butchers and a resolution passed that an increase or certain prices per pound shall be made on cash sales as well as contracted transactions.

We wish the public to understand that the increase in prices was decided upon only after the most careful consideration and only for necessity's sake.

The following Butchers in the International Settlement will come under the above resolution:

Yue-Shing, The Oxford Butchery, Cosmopolitan, Wei-Zee, Zang-Zoong, Teh-Fong, Yung-Foong, The Hanbury, The Shanghai Butchers, Yun-Kee, Foh-Loong, Zung-Zoong, Ziang-Kee, San-Mow, Yuen-Cheong, Woo-Mei, Yue-Woo, Yao-Tsing-Kee, Zee-Ah-De, Tsen-Kee, Hop-Shing, Dong-Hing, Yah-Foong, North-Hong-Kee, Tsen-Tai, Yung-Tai-Foh, The Asia, San-Tai, and Shing-Mow.

The following Butchers in the French Settlement will come under the above resolution:

Zung-Shing-Kun-Kee, Yung-Sin, Sau-Woo, Zung-Shing-Hop Kee, Yung-Shing-Fau, Hong-Kee, and Dong-Hing.

Shanghai, 21st January, 1921.

FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT of the
Tsin Dah (晉大莊)
and
Wei Dah (會大莊) Banks

The above-mentioned banks have duly paid all accounts due by them by allotment and instalment. Several creditors, however, who should have claimed have not done so. We advertised in the fourth, eighth and ninth moons, in the Shun Pao, Sin Wan Pao, North China Daily News and in this paper, inviting the creditors to draw payment not later than the end of the ninth moon, otherwise they would lose their power to claim, and the funds would be turned over for benevolent purposes. Our liquidating office has been established for years, and, as the end of the Chinese year is approaching, we have abolished it without further waiting, and the funds unclaimed by the creditors have been donated to benevolent causes in accordance with our previous meeting, in order that the matter may be concluded finally. All notes and pass books remaining in the possession of Chinese or foreigners, are hereby declared to be null and void, and the public is hereby requested to note this final declaration.

FOR SALE
A Coromandel Screen

There is at present in Shanghai a wonderful Coromandel screen, of which there is not a match either in New York, London or Paris, and which is a unique specimen.

The screen was given by Emperor Kanghi to a Viceroy, at the end of the seventeenth century and has, since then, been kept preciously by the descendants. On a ground of dark brown lacquer there is an exquisite display of flowers, birds of paradise and peacocks in beautiful old colors and gold. This kind of decoration is very rare and much sought after by foreign collectors. The screen is 11 feet high and about 24 feet in width; it has twelve folds and is in perfect condition. It will be shortly sent to Europe, but can be seen here by prospective buyers only and by applying for appointment to Box 438, THE CHINA PRESS.

FOR SALE

A large Salamandre stove. A Winchester automatic sporting gun, 12 bore, 5 shots, in perfect condition. A strong punching ball on stand. A fine Victrola Cabinet with about fifty of the best Red Seal records. Owner going home. Apply to Box 439, THE CHINA PRESS.

FOR SALE

OWNER going home: a fine Indian powerplus motor-cycle, practically new, having run a few hundred miles only, 8 h.p. Guaranteed in perfect order. Will sell 30 percent below cost price. Apply to Box 440, THE CHINA PRESS.

Jute Fabrics

Mr. J. A. Fredericks writes as follows in their jute fabrics circular dated January 21.

Business in Jute fabrics is still in a stagnant condition due to the absence of exports; and, though stocks are not particularly heavy here, the above fact coupled with the nearness of the Chinese New Year makes the native dealers willing to sell at price below replacement cost.

Cotton

Messrs. J. Spunt and Company write as follows in their cotton market report dated today.

China Cotton.—Since our last issue there has been practically no activity in our market, nevertheless prices continued steady with a firm undertone in that holders were in no way inclined to dispose of their stocks unless at rates more in conformity with their own views. The demand on the part of the Mills may be set down as negligible throughout the period under review, nor were there any signs of shorts covering, which circumstances make it the more remarkable for the general steadiness and immovability in the current value of the local staple and which may be attributed in a more or less degree to monetarial relaxation equably distributed without any undue pressure bearing on those in possession of supplies either big or small. Such a condition of affairs has not been experienced for some time past and more particularly at a time not so distant from the approaching Chinese New Year settlements. Under these circumstances it augurs well for the local fibre in that the near future may witness some upward tendencies no sooner any legitimate demand makes itself felt coupled with a continued drooping silver exchange debarring to a great extent importations of foreign growth. Tone of the market, Steady.

No. 1 Crepe $0.40 per pound equivalent to 11d. ex warehouse Singapore.

Market steady. Offered 876 tons; sold 610 tons.

Cannibal Morals

Queer Secrets Of East Africa

The full wonders of the Rev. John Roscoe's year among East African tribes—will not be known for months or even years—not till the medicinal herbs and poisons he brought back have been analysed and his hundreds of photographs and volumes of MS. and scores of cases of relics examined and compared.

Mr. Roscoe, one of our greatest ethnologists, went out for the Royal Society and the Government in May last year, and the expedition was most generously financed by Sir Peter Mackie.

A journey richer in discovery of tribal customs and superstitions has never been made before. But already results of value to human life as well as science are in sight.

Mr. Roscoe found among the best tribes that the infant mortality was terrible and this was almost wholly due to drugs. Out of sheer kindness the babies are dosed with drug after drug, most made from crushed herbs, given in water or milk.

BROTHER'S WIFE SHARED

A marriage custom that baffled the missionaries was made plain, to the great relief of both Church and Government. It is this. Though the people are for the most part monogamous—one man marries one wife—certain temporary exceptions are approved. A mother is separated from her husband both before the birth of the baby and for three years after, when she is expected to nurse the child. During this period the husband shares his brother's wife, and the custom leads to no ill-feeling.

The King of Banyoro, before he became Christian, was so hard worked in his vocation as High Priest that a day's rest became necessary after two day's work. He lived on milk, but ate a certain amount of "ceremonial beef." This was put into his mouth on an iron fork, and if a tooth so much as touched the iron death was to be the penalty.

The opening ceremony at or before dawn was for the King to lay his forehead to the forehead of a black cow, which stood for night, and evil. While in this position he prayed to be rid of all evil things. Next he touched heads with a red and white cow, who stood for the rising sun and all good things, and prayed for blessings innumerable on the people.

HANDSOME ON MILK DIET

Scientifically the central achievement of Mr. Roscoe has been to prove to the hilt that an Asiatic people (Semites) migrated up the Nile and reached as far south perhaps as the Zulus. They are livers on milk—and Mr. Roscoe has a complete collection of all utensils and instruments and paraphernalia concerning the milk customs—a collection valuable beyond all estimate.

These tribes are very handsome. They have kept themselves separate from other tribes, and what connection they have had has been to use their weaker and less civilised neighbors as slaves.

Mr. Roscoe found prevailing among some of these tribes many customs that the students of Egyptology write of as extinct a thousands years ago. Indeed, he saw with his eyes and photographed with his camera the almost mythological things on which Egyptology is based.

Many of the things he saw (and some he photographed) cannot be written down. Cannibal tribes on the highland near the Albert Nyanza had habits of incredible degradation. They would, for example, flavor their bread by dipping it into living flesh.

MORALITY AND DIVORCE

Laws of old standing and good sense and considerable complication have been handed down dealing with morality, with marriage laws, with fines for adultery, with reasons for divorce and methods of it, and with land tenure of many sorts.

In all Mr. Roscoe made a complete survey of the customs of five tribes, and one only less complete of two others. He just missed the Pygmies who had slipped over into Belgian territory, and could not get into Abyssinia—one of his chief objects—owing to prevailing war.

Probably the most complicated and thorough-going ceremonial concerned the initiation of both youth and maiden into puberty. Both undergo operations (photographs were taken of the male initiation ceremony and part of the female); and these are of great severity and cruelty though wonderfully endured.

We At Least Know Where France Stands

THAT France stands as firmly as ever for the full execution of the Treaty of Versailles as against Germany, and is wholly unmoved and cold to the British and Italian proposals for an interpretation of it along the lines of "sweet reasonableness" is clearly demonstrated by the declaration of foreign policy issued by the new French government and published on the front page of today's CHINA PRESS.

M. Leygues apparently failed because he was not, in the opinion of the French public and press, fighting stubbornly enough for the exact terms of the Treaty. M. Briand, a born fighter, six times Premier of France, was put in his place, and it is with M. Briand's statement to the French Chamber that we have to deal today.

This document shows that France is in the saddle and that she proposes to see the treaty through as it stands. She is confident of the German power to pay and she entertains no qualms regarding her ability, so long as she has the support of her Allies to make Germany pay. And this support she counts upon. As to whether she is fully justified in expecting this support, no one can foretell. The situation throughout Europe is so strained that forecasting of political developments is become a mere gamble, likely to land one in a fool's paradise, as likely in the nethermost pit. And between the two there is little choice, the latter probably being preferable because of its certainty.

In the document before us the disarmament of Germany comes in for first mention. "That is the vital question of France. . . We shall not fail in that duty."

Reparations comes next. "In this we shall have the support of our Allies, and we shall ask it of them in the name of law and justice."

Germany has been conquered but not devastated. "It is possible to foresee her speedy recuperation." And France would place no obstacle in the way of such recovery, "but for the prosperity of the aggressors, following upon their defeat, to contrast with the ruin of the victors, would be a challenge to the most elementary moral justice, which France cannot accept."

It is a fighting declaration. And yet France is only insisting on Germany's being made to carry out her contractual obligations. "France claims all her due, which is reasonable. She does not ask the impossible."

Confidence is expressed that "England will help us to the full extent of her power." It is France's intimate union with England "that insures the peace of the world."

"Close alliance between Great Britain and France is the basis of our foreign policy." And yet, if we are to interpret the utterances of their press and statesmen as accurately reflecting public sentiment, the two countries are far apart. They are hardly in agreement on any European question of first importance.

Next M. Briand turns his eyes towards Italy. "We confidently expect to find in Rome the same friendly attitude towards the questions which are of import to us that the Italians found in Paris towards the solution of the Adriatic questions."

This in face of the fact that the Italian Cabinet "had decided (we had it by U. S. Naval Radio through Reuter, under date of Jan. 16) that it will be impossible for Italy to support any measure in the Supreme Council which is calculated to compel Germany completely to fulfill the obligations of the Versailles Treaty, or any which would force Turkey to accept the present settlement of the near Eastern situation."

Italy indeed is much more beset with social and industrial unrest than England is, and the domestic problems with which the statesmen of both countries are confronted are of utmost gravity, and while it would be their unquestionable desire to hurry their peoples to the support of France, the difficulties in that direction are not to be lightly discounted; nor can they be dismissed by a gesture.

Next we come to the thoughts of M. Briand regarding America. "We are sure that our American friends will give us the same invaluable support towards recovering reparation for our injuries that decided the victory in the great war."

In view of what has transpired in America since the Armistice we can only greet this observation as one of inspired optimism. America was not satisfied with the Peace Treaty and she was not satisfied with the League of Nations. She has refused to make peace and has overwhelmingly refused to join the League of Nations. She is for the moment carefully withdrawn behind her long and frowning coasts, reconstructing her own affairs, not vitally interested in foreign affairs, except insofar as they relate to foreign trade, a big navy and Pacific problems. She will have nothing to do with the reparations decision. That decision will be made by Great Britain, France and Italy, if it is made at all. Leaving America out of it, which she is, entirely, will these three be able to agree on this question of reparations?

Then the problem of Russia. France refuses "to resume relations with any Russian government which declines to recognise the obligations of the preceding governments of that country." Yet other nations are resuming relations with Russia and France herself has given permission to her merchants to trade with Russia on their own responsibility. And supposing Moscow tomorrow should rescind the order which repudiated the foreign obligations of the Tsar's government: would that bring payment closer? Only peace and foreign trade can make it possible for Russia to pay.

All this. And yet there stands France, brightly limned, sharply outlined, immutable. She alone of all the nations of the world seems to know her own mind. And who shall say she is wrong? Who is there to challenge her statemen that she fought for law and justice and right? That Germany was the aggressor and therefore ought to pay for the damage she inflicted? And who is there to challenge her statement on the disarmament of Germany, or to question her claim to a better knowledge and understanding of Germany than that possessed by any other nation?

It is a difficult matter.

BABIES—TEACHERS—AND MEN

"All babies are born good," said Lord Palmerston, echoing the sentiment that with Rousseau passed for philosophy, and that with Wordsworth worked up into standard poetry.

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting,
The soul that rises with us our life's star
Hath had elsewhere its setting and cometh from afar,
Not in entire forgetfulness
And not in utter nakedness
But with TRAILING CLOUDS OF GLORY
Do we come from God, which is our home.

* * *

It is true that the Chinese, with that exasperating way of theirs, have anticipated this thought, and embodied it in their first reading-book. What we regard as a rather smart remark they have reduced to the level of the commonplace; for the very first sentence a little Chinaman reads in his Celestial Reader is:

"Men at their birth are by nature radically good."

Long before this opinion gained ground in the West, at an early period in the world's history when wisdom must have been much more uncommon than now (outside China, be it always understood), a certain Bias of Priene earned his place among the Seven Wise Men of Greece by proclaiming the depressing truth:

"Most men are bad."

Any teacher who places these two statements side by side, and draws the natural inference, must feel called upon to take his place in the dock and plead. For the period between babyhood and manhood is precisely the period for which the teacher is responsible. If we spend our lives in turning good babies into bad men, then is our craft, indeed, in danger.

But before putting in the necessary plea of "Not Guilty," let the teacher question the validity of the charge. Before trying a man for murder, it is well to see that the "corpse" is really dead. As a provisional plea admit that the teacher is responsible for the school life of the aforesaid baby, who has turned out a bad man.

But all babies are not born good (ask father), and most men are not bad. Certainly the babies who come into our schools have left far behind them the clouds of glory they are credited with trailing after them from the higher realm from which they have come.

As a counter plea, if the teacher is pressed, he might carry the war into the enemies' country, and bring up the artillery of the good old-fashioned doctrine of "Original Sin."

In China, where we have seen that men are "by nature radically good," the master seems to be held responsible for any change in this highly desirable state of affairs. With a fine devotion to logical consistency those Chinamen, in cases of parricide, used to, and in parts still do, execute not only the parricide himself, but also his teacher. So even in China:

"The teacher's lot is not a happy one."

Who are the good and who are the bad? Or to put it into school-room parlance who are the clever, and who are the duffers? A well known educationalist once gave it as his opinion that in a school five percent were clever, five percent duffers and the rest average. But that was perhaps inside school. Take them outside and it is likely that the duffers become the clever, and the clever become duffers. Many a boy will shine at cricket and score runs as rapidly as the scorer can place them to his credit. Set him to Horace and he may not be able to gather a single mark.

Take an example: young Walter Scott, the dunce of his class, the boy who could never thoroughly master the Greek alphabet—So widespread was the tale of his stupidity that poor Walter in later years was forced with humorous pathos to write in his diary that he was not such a fool as they put him down. Had young Sir Walter been tested in Scottish history instead of Greek characters, his position in school would have been different.

So all babies are not good; all men are not bad; the stupid may be clever; the clever may be stupid; and so:

"There's hope in this world for us all."

Wrangel's Defeat Sheds Light On Trotsky's 'Labor Army'

By Capt. Francis McCullagh
(Correspondence of The New York Herald)
(CONCLUDED)

I had lived in Ekaterinburg previously to the occasion of Trotsky's visit first in 1918 when the Czechs were there, and again in 1919 when Kolchak's troops and a battalion of the Hampshire Regiment occupied it. On both these occasions it had been a very busy place, the railway station being blocked with staff trains, most of which might be briefly described as bordels ambulants; the station platform, a local Piccadilly in more senses than one, being always crowded with officers and ladies; the streets filled with soldiers, horses, cabs and the speeding motor-cars of great Generals; the shops and eating houses full of food; the market place crowded with farmers' carts. In fact it was, like any other army base, a town of good cheer, overcrowding, khaki, "hustle," horses and sin. Boisterous, imperfect, with streaks of religion and bursts of philanthropy, it was, with all its faults, human.

SEES GREAT CHANGE

The Ekaterinburg that met my eyes on this visit was completely changed. Trying to describe that change to myself in one word I meant to say "Bolshevism," but found myself saying "Puritanism." For between the two there are the most astonishing resemblances, perhaps because extremes meet, perhaps because the one is as pre-Christian as the other is post-Christian. I know that it ought not to be so and that Lenin should be seated on a heap of skulls quaffing human blood, while Trotsky should be engaged nightly in bacchanaliam revels; but, as a matter of fact, Lenin leads as austere a life as Oliver Cromwell while Trotsky is as busy as Lloyd George.

The platform of Ekaterinburg station was no longer promenade, and only people who had business to do came there. It was sometimes deserted altogether save for three grim and watchful figures thirty paces apart, Trotsky's janizaries. One great hall in the station had been turned into a typhus hospital and another great hall into a "propaganda point." The station walls were covered with advertisements, not advertisements of the nerve tablets and hair tonics order, but Bolshevik propaganda advertisements.

At each end of the platform was painted a huge notice ordering all C. C.'s to bring their men without fail to the "propaganda point" and to apply there for newspapers and "literature," which would be given free.

These propaganda points exist in every station along the Siberian line and are very remarkable institutions. The largest hall in the station building is always selected and is generally presided over by a C 3 Red soldier who has a tiny office apart. Seated there on a collection of Bolshevist newspapers, he wrestles in his spare moments with the voluminous volumes of Karl Marx, indicates to the young the damnable and pernicious heresies of Krautsky, or engages in edifying conversation about Lenine's latest encyclical with wise, ungodly old Communists from the local Soviet.

FEATURE KARL MARX

Over the entrance of the Ekaterinburg hall there was painted in large letters the text, "Those who work not, neither must they eat," while inside one saw on every wall the well known appeal of Karl Marx, "Workers of the world unite! You have a world to gain and only your chains to lose."

The pictures and cartoons with which the whole interior was covered from floor to ceiling might be divided into several groups: 1. Those praising the Red army and calculated to foster a military spirit. 2. Those condemning capitalists, priests and militarists. 3. Those flattering the workman and promising him the overlordship of the world. 4. Those exciting anger against foreign countries, particularly France and England.

There were appeals to the railway workmen not to go on strike, but to remember that by striking would inflict a deadly blow on democracy, and that though their present discomforts were great there was a good time coming.

There were charts showing the parts of machine guns and the way to make bombs, and these were generally accompanied by explanatory letter press and by appeals to the workmen to drill and arm and study the mechanism of their rifles, so that no power on earth could disarm them and force them back again into the old servitude.

Side by side with these were charts explaining the construction of the latest agricultural machinery and exhorting the peasantry to make themselves proficient agriculturists.

The attacks on religion consisted of caricatures showing monks and priests making money out of holy relics and squandering that money privately on revels and debauchery. The priest was sometimes represented as a huge leering spider weaving his web around the muzhik and his wife and children; and these anti-clerical cartoons were generally accompanied by satirical doggerel from the pen of the Soviet's principal poet, a Moscow Communist who writes a great deal of coarse, satirical verse under the pen name of Ivan Bedny (Poor John).

Many huge colored cartoons were devoted to Kolchak and Denikin, and were mostly vulgar but effective.

The triumph of the Red Army was exhibited, not without a rough art, in a series of cartoons, some showing the Red soldiers winding through frozen steppes, others showing them charging madly through the smoke of battle.

ELIMINATION OF LANDLORD

In one double picture a number of bloated capitalists, smirking priests and purple nosed Generals were shown in the act of binding the Russian workman in chains. In the other section of the same picture the workman was seen breaking the chains, scattering his would-be masters right and left, and jumping on the stomach of the fattest of them.

The "elimination" of the landlord was represented in a cartoon containing many sections. In the early sections we had the old days of serfdom; in the latter sections we had the landlord running for his life, accompanied by the parish priest, and finally a prosperous and contented peasantry owning everything in sight and provided with a palatial and well attended Communist school, but with no public house or church in the village.

Some posters dealt with British rule in India and others with the situation in Ireland. The Bolshevist expert on Irish affairs is a Comrade Kerzhentseff, who was in Ireland during the Easter rebellion and has published a number of pamphlets on "The Irish Revolution" and the Irish question generally. Being an able journalist and head of the Rosta (Russian Socialist Telegraph Agency), he makes great capital out of the present state of things in Ireland.

An almost religious tone was lent to this Propaganda Hall by the pictures relating to Karl Marx. One showed a sinking ship in which all humanity was perishing save only one man, who was standing on a raft in the form of an open book, across which was written the name "Karl Marx." There were also numerous busts of Karl Marx, looking patriarchal in long hair and beard, but the most prominent object was the red star of Bolshevism, a huge construction of red glass with a light inside, fixed high up near the ceiling and throwing a baleful light on the great crowd always gathered underneath in the evenings.

These crowds attended the service of song and "instruction" which went on daily from about 5 o'clock to midnight, and which was certainly very popular, for I never found it possible to get anything but standing room. The best local singers and musicians, as well as good musicians from Russia, performed gratis on a platform at the end of the room where there was a piano and an orchestra. Not only were revolutionary songs given; classical songs by Pushkin and Lermentov were also heard, as well as music by Tchaikovsky and other great composers. Recitations, lectures on art, education, socialism, typhus, and every conceivable subject lent variety to the entertainment.

SLOGAN OF BOLSHEVISM

I have already alluded to the decorations in honor of Trotsky's arrival. These took the form of Red flags passim, of many triumphal arches, of many pictures of Lenin and Trotsky on the walls, and of all sorts of other pictures, as well as a vast amount of bunting, evergreens, transparencies and colored cloth on all the house fronts.

Everywhere, in gigantic letters, the war cry of Bolshevism shouted at one: "Workers of the World Unite!" If anything ever becomes true by constant repetition, this union must soon take place, for it is a stereotyped heading on every issue of every newspaper; it appears in about a dozen languages on some of the Bolshevist paper money, it appears on all the propaganda matter and all the Government stationery, and Bolshevik mothers paste it over their child's cradle as an American mother pastes "God Bless Our Home."

The former British Consulate, which had been converted into a Bolshevist Government office, had broken out into a perfect eruption of decorations with a picture of Lenin, framed in a wreath of evergreens, as the center of the scheme. The French Consulate next door, which had been converted into a Court of Justice, was similarly decorated and carried a picture of Trotsky. Peter the Great had been knocked off his pedestal in the center of the town, and his place had been taken by a large marble head of Karl Marx. Catherine the Great had also been deposed. In front of the Cathedral was a great pyramidical erection of wood covered with red cloth bearing the inscription "To Labor." It was adorned with brass plaques representing half-naked figures toiling in mines, forges and factories, these figures being so well designed that I suspect the plaques must have been taken from some museum.

STREET NAMES CHANGED

The house where the Czar was murdered was converted into an office of the Political Department and bore a great painting representing the Red army charging through smoke and snow. The square in front of this house had been called "Resurrection Place," but that name has now been changed to "The Square of National Vengeance," which shows that the Bolshevists, who ought to know, entertain none of those doubts about the murder of the Czar which some people in this country still harbor.

The street that runs north and south of that square is called Karl Liebknecht Street, and the other principal street, in which the municipal theater is situated, is called Lenin Street. All the remaining streets and squares have also had their names changed.

Formerly there were few Government institutions and no clubs in Ekaterinburg, but now there are whole streets consisting of nothing else. Instead of promoting business, however, this multiplication of Government offices has killed it. The dead hand of Government control has stifled every kind of enterprise.

The town had many Communist eating houses, but they are only for Communists. And a disagreeable workhouse appearance they all had. Exactly the same in every respect save that some bore the sign "Soviet Government Eating House For Adults," and others the sign "Soviet Government Eating House For Children." The children, by the way, are well fed in both Ekaterinburg and in Moscow, but this is all part of a large and cunning scheme to get them from their mothers and make them regard themselves as children of the State and not bound by ties of peculiar affection to any man and woman.

Repelled by the blank, barrack-like exterior of the Soviet feeding troughs, I tried to buy food elsewhere, but I found it utterly impossible.

It was not that the Red army had eaten up everything or that all the food had been sent to European Russia, for no food had been sent across the Urals since the Bolshevists came to that town, which lies close to one of the richest agricultural districts in the world; and, though there had been a White army in Ekaterinburg when I was there last, the civilians could nevertheless get plenty of food. The reason for this stoppage lies in the Socialist theory that the State should feed everybody and that there should be no private restaurants, no shops, and no middle class at all. This kills all private enterprise as surely as a tree is killed by the cutting away of its roots.

EMIGRANTS FOR PALESTINE

They Are Being Carefully Selected In Central And Eastern Europe

Emigration of Jews is increasing rapidly in Central and Eastern Europe, and the new Palestine immigration regulations would allow of a controlled immigration of about 17,000 Zionists of the pioneer class during the coming year, according to the Secretary of the Zionist Organisation in an interview in a Vienna newspaper.

The Secretary said the selection of the immigrants is being made by the Zionist Organisation, which has established Palestine offices in the important Jewish centers. Preference is given to young people, strong in body and determined in spirit, who have had actual experience in agriculture or other manual work and who know Hebrew.

Several thousands of such pioneers have already left and others are waiting in the large centers until proper arrangements for their transport can be made and until new openings for employment in Palestine are reported. One of the features of the pioneer movement is that it includes a fair proportion of girls of well-to-do families, who have decided to devote their lives to the new Palestine. They act as "land girls" and take care of the domestic arrangements in the Jewish colonies.

Sun 3,000,000 Miles Nearer To Us In Winter Than In Summer, And 8,000 Miles Further Away At Night Than In Day

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"In the course of an argument between A and B, A claimed that the distance between the southern portion of Illinois (our locality) and the sun is greater during the Winter months than during the Summer months. Please clear this matter up, with specific reference to our locality.—S. T. and A. U."

Not long ago I received a letter whose writer supposed that the greater heat experienced in Summer was due to the greater nearness of the sun at that season to the parts of the earth that lie under the Tropic of Cancer. If you are in doubt as to where the Tropic of Cancer is, look it up in your school geography. You will find it running through the middle of Mexico and between Florida and Cuba, and so on in a circle around the world.

That letter and the one above both indicate the same misapprehension concerning the relations between the sun and the earth. Yet these things are the A B C of astronomy, and to get them wrong is at least as bad as to make a gross error in grammar.

To begin with Mr. "A," has got the facts turned wrong end foremost with regard to the relative distances of the sun in Winter and in Summer. In Winter—i. e., the Winter that we of the Northern hemisphere know, for when we have Winter they have Summer in the Southern hemisphere—in our Winter, then, the distance of the sun is about 3,000,000 miles less than it is in our Summer.

THE POSITION OF THE SUN

The times when the sun is nearest and farthest respectively occur at the beginning of January and the beginning of July. From January to July the earth recedes from the sun; from July to January it approaches the sun. The reason why we have Winter, or cold weather, when the sun is so much nearer than it was in Summer (its distance on July 4 last was about 94,500,000 miles) is because at that time the Northern Hemisphere of the earth is inclined away from the sun instead of towards it, as in the Summer months. Consequently the sun's rays are received more slopingly, or at a lower angle, and so have less heating power for a given area. It is similar to the effect of turning your face away from a fire.

Now observe that the difference of distance of the sun at the two seasons applies to the earth as a whole. Astronomical distances are calculated from center to center of the globular bodies to which they refer. Thus the mean distance between the earth and the sun is estimated at 92,897,000 miles from center to center. Accordingly the same measure applies to Southern Illinois as to any other point on the earth's surface indifferently.

At night when the sun is on the opposite side of the earth from the place where you happen to be its distance from you is about 8,000 miles greater than when it is overhead in the daytime. But this 8,000 miles is only about 1-11,600 part of the total distance. Besides, the actual difference of the sun, notwithstanding all the refinements that science has been able to apply in ascertaining it, yet remains uncertain to the extent of at least 1-1,000 part of itself, which you will perceive is more than eleven times as large as the difference of distance produced by adding or subtracting the diameter of the earth.

ANGULAR RAYS

To recur to the question about the Tropic of Cancer. At the summer solstice of the northern hemisphere, which occurs about Jun 21, and marks the moment of the farthest northern advance of the sun each year, the sun is vertical in the sky above the circle of the Tropic of Cancer.

Its rays then descend at their highest angle, or slope, on the northern hemisphere, and, other things being equal, they should then feel hottest. But owing to the time taken for the earth and the atmosphere to accumulate heat, the greatest Summer temperature ordinarily occurs several weeks later. Now, it should be observed that it is not an actual approach of the sun nearer to that part of the earth which lies under, or along, the tropic of Cancer that causes the increase in the effect of its rays, for, in fact, the sun is farther away at that time than it was in Winter, but it is the angular nearness of the sun, to the plane of the tropic projected against the dome of the sky.

The tropic of Cancer lies 23½ degrees north of the equator, and when the sun is at, or near, the circle of the tropic, extended to the heavens above, it is twice that number of degrees higher from the horizon than it was in mid-Winter, so that its rays descend much more nearly in a vertical direction and thus have a greater heating effect upon every square foot of surface exposed to them. But it often seems very difficult to make people believe that the change in the inclination of the sun's rays between Summer and Winter has a far greater effect upon their heating power on the earth than the coincident change in the sun's distance.

A Militarist Plan To Replace Christianity: Another Son Of The Gods

The same correspondent who recently sent the report of the killing of Koreans in Fengtien province, now contributes the following article on a religion which he says is being actively pushed by Japanese agents working among offset to Christianity. Reference to this same religion was made in the Korean Information Bureau's letter which we printed recently.

Part of the recent activity of Japanese agents working among the Koreans in Manchuria has been the proclamation of a new religion to replace Christianity. What has happened of late is urged as a reason why people should quickly adhere to this religion, in order that they may obtain protection from the Japanese troops. (This refers to Fengtien province.)

The religion has only been preached for a week or two, therefore some points in the following account may be inaccurate, but it may be accepted as correct in the main. The history of the sect is presented somewhat as follows:

A KOREAN FOUNDER

The name Tsi-yu given to the religion was the personal name of its founder, who was a Korean of the name, Ts'wei Tsi-yu. He was born 97 years ago, on the 6th day of the 9th moon. Therefore adherents date the present year as the 97th year after the Incarnation of the Boundless Helper of the World.

"Ts'wei was at first an adherent of the Roman Catholic Church in Korea; but in the 4th moon of the year 1860 he received a special revelation after 100 days of prayer, at a place called the Dragon Rapids, hence his title of the 'Dragon Rapids Teacher.' One day, after he returned to his home, his people were amazed to see him illumined by an unearthly light, brighter than sun or moon. He counselled them not to be afraid, for he was sent by God. He told them to proclaim the following doctrine far and wide: 'He who is Lord of Heaven heeds my desires, eternally fruitful, and things in accord.' This was the beginning of the Wait-on-Heaven religion.

MIRACULOUS POWERS

Ts'wei developed miraculous gifts of healing and of levitation, with the ability to pass in and out of rooms, the doors of which were fast closed. He soon came against the Korean imperial power of that time, and when summoned to say by what authority he performed these miracles, asserted that he was the son of God. He would not, however, oppose the authority of the Emperor, which, like his own, was Heaven-bestowed. The Emperor decreed that he was to be executed. It is said that after he had been decapitated, there remained no corpse, but only a block of wood. From this his followers argued that he had cheated death and would rise again."

The Wait-on-Heaven religion is said to have continued under its second head, the apostle, Ts'wei Shih-heng, who is now entitled "Great Officer of the Sea and Moon," but it was languishing, if not moribund, at the time of the Japanese annexation of Korea in 1910. Now a third head controls it, an apostle of the name of Kin (or Kim) Yu-yung, who is said to be very much in the favor of the Japanese Government. The Tsi-yu religion is simply a development of the Wait-on-Heaven religion. It is described as follows:

Aim: to publish virtue in the world, and everywhere to help mankind.

Main Idea: that men wait on Heaven, and love others as themselves.

Origins: Confucianism, Buddhism, and Ancestor-worship.

Practice: Sincerity, Reverence, and Fidelity."

To the oracular doctrine mentioned above has been added this other:

"Wait upon Heaven's Lord, the sure Creator, eternally fruitful, knowing all things; until you attain your desire of great promotion."

A TYPICAL PRAYER

The following is given as a specimen of the prayers employed by adherents of this religion:

"O God, O Helper of the World, O Officer Great of Sea and Moon. Boundless Virtue of the Triune, Holy Spirits inspiring and responsive, this day we celebrate the rites of the Day of Restoration (special name for Sunday). Publish virtue in the world, everywhere help mankind, guard our country, and give its peoples. This is our great desire."

The religion asserts its affiliation to Confucianism, Buddhism, and Ancester-Worship; and this idea is emphasised by those who preach it, that Orientals should adhere to an Eastern religion, and quit the Occidental. But though self-described as of Eastern origin, it resembles Christianity so much, even to its phraseology, as to look like a conscious or unconscious parody of the Christian religion. This constitutes the temptation to Korean Christians. To them adherence involves recantation of Christianity, whereas for non-Christians it may mean no more than a convenient, parrot-like passwood to security.

Members are provided with cards of membership, on which are written their names, ages, and other particulars for identification. Possession of such a card is said to procure immunity from Japanese military persecution.

Preachers of the religion who secure 50 new members are entitled Introducers, and those who gain 1,000 are called Bishops. The general name given to the preachers is "Profound springs." Their support is obtained by a levy of rice according to the number of persons in a household.—Peking Leader.

The Rest Is Silence

BY LISLE BELL

We feel sorry for the eight-year-old Polish boy who has landed in the United States heralded as the world's champion chess-nut, or words to that effect. But although we feel sorry for him, we don't feel sorry enough for him to go to a theater and sit all evening watching him play twenty simultaneous games. We'd much prefer to watch twenty simultaneous chorus girls, even though they don't make quite so many moves.

We believe in refined entertainment, however. Make no mistake about that. But we regard twenty simultaneous games of chess as entirely too refined. It lacks what President-elect Harding so aptly calls "normalcy."

The reason we have such decided views on the subject of chess is because we were invited to a chess tournament once. We had been working hard and thought of going out into the country for a rest. But a friend said we could find all the peace and quiet we desired if we would go to a chess tournament with him. He said the silence would do us good. It would soothe our nerves.

A bunch of chess players is the greatest anti-noise organisation we ever discovered. It ought to be a good plan for cities to pave the streets in front of hospitals with chess players to deaden the sound. At a chess tournament the silence is so thick you could saw it out in blocks and pack it away in sawdust like natural ice.

The silence becomes so prominent that it becomes painful. A chess player can't think if there is a noise.

They all sit around felt-covered tables in a room which has a sound-proof cork floor and think—and think. About once in every five minutes, in a real fast game, someone makes a move. So far as we know, no one ever died of muscular overdevelopment as the result of chess playing.

In chess you never make a move until you have figured out all the consequences—even unto the third and the fourth generation. You must dope out not only what you are going to do, but what your opponent will do then, and then what you'll do next, and after that what he'll do. That's where the brain-work comes in.

Another reason why chess players are so deliberate is because of the fear of noise. A sudden move on the part of one of the players might cause his elbow joint to crack, and the sound would annoy all the other players.

Although we didn't have the endurance to stay until the end of the chess tournament, we are under the impression that the winner was the man who was still in his chair after all the others had fallen to the floor from sheer exhaustion and lack of sleep. We don't even know that the first prize was, but we know what it ought to have been. A muffler.

Chess is a great game for those who dislike a cemetery because it's so noisy.

Hamlet must have had a game of chess in mind when he said: "The rest is silence."

By the way, we wonder how those who go to the theater to watch the Polish prodigy will express their applause. Probably by wiggling their ears, which is the most silent method of physical movement with which we are acquainted.

CZECHO-SLOVAK LOSS IS DUE TO FORGERY

Legation In Tokio Officially Denies Reported Theft Of Large Sum Of Money

Tokio, Jan. 13.—Forgeries have been made of important official documents and telegrams in the possession of the Czecho-Slovak Legation in Tokio.

This statement is authorised for publication by Mr. Karel Pergler, Czecho-Slovak Minister, through the Legation's secretary, Mr. Karel Kirzlink, in refutation to stories published yesterday that the Legation had been robbed of a large sum of money the amount varying from Y50,000 to Y100,000, depending on the paper read.

It is known that Mr. Pergler visiter the Tokio Local Court Thursday afternoon, going from there to the Foreign Office, where he was closeted with Mr. Okabe, one of the secretaries.

ARREST REPORTED SOUGHT

Mr. Antonion E. Novak, a typist attached to the Legation, sailed for America on the Fushimi Maru December 28 after making large purchases here and insuring his personal effects for Y2,000 with the Tsukan Forwarding Agency of Nihombashi.

The object of Mr. Pergler's visit to the Foreign Office according to vernacular press reports which are neither specificially affirmed nor denied at the Legation, was to request that a warrant for Mr. Novak's arrest be sent by wireless to the Captain of the Fushimi Maru. The charge is not stated. It was reported at a late hour last night that no action had as yet been taken at the Foreign Office.

When the rumor of a robbery leaked out late Thursday afternoon, a reporter of the Asahi called at the Legation in Aoyama. He was received courteously, but was told there been no robbery nor was anything wrong at the Legation.

Yesterday morning a number of the Japanese papers in Tokio carried stories of a specificular robbery at the Legation and the "absconding" of Mr. Novak. It was asserted by some that Y50,000 had been stolen; by others that the amount was Y100,000. Details were published, saying that tradesmen who went to the Legation to collect bills were turned away by the statement that the robbery had taken all of the Legation's immediate cash.

CALLED PURE FABRICATION

"There has been no robbery and the stories in the vernacular press are pure fabrications," said the secretary to a reporter of The Japan Advertiser yesterday afternoon. "Most of our money is kept in checks. No one would keep Y100,000 in cash in a private safe. It is true that Mr. Pergler, who is just now out of the city, is engaged in certain negotiations which will be made public later if they are successful."

The secretary continued to deprecate the published stories, denying in a general way all that had been printed.

Later, after having got into touch with Mr. Pergler, he issued the official statement that there had been no robbery of funds but that there had been forgeries of official documents and telegrams.

Siccawei Weather Reports

20.—The depression becomes very deep and violent between Tokio and Hokkaido where NW gales are reported. The barometric maximum proceeds a little Southward in the Yangtsze and Sikiang Valleys. Very fine day in N China, with mild temperature in our Valley; rain at places in the South.

21.—The pressure is still falling below the normal level. The wind is backing to SW. Very fine and bright weather, relatively mild.

SURGEONS OF RUSSIA FIND ANAESTHETIC

New Discovery Declared Of Great Value In Many Forms Of Operation

Paris, December 14.—An anaesthetic with relatively no danger and "pleasant to take" is said to have been produced and used in the hospitals of Soviet Russia. Dr. Marcou, once an interne of the Paris hospitals, describes the process in an article written for L'Information. He asserts that he watched the new method used in Petrograd hospitals. He attributes its experimental use on animals to Professor Kravkoff and its application to operations on persons to Professor Fedovoff, formerly surgeon to the Emperor.

Dr. Marcou says the patient awakes from the sleep produced by it a little heavy in the head, but without nausea or in effects.

SUBCUTANEOUS DOSE

It is methylpropylcarbinol in the proportion of one to 100 parts of warm, salty water that does the business, he says. This is injected directly into a large vein in the elbow and the hollow tube is left in the vein so more may be pumped in as needed.

When from 100 to 200 grams of the liquid have been put in the blood the patient sleeps, but there still remains reflex action in the eyes, which is taken as the standard of anaesthetisation.

As more of the sleep producer is used sensitiveness leaves the eyes and the surgeon operates, testing the eyes from time to time so as to keep the blood system supplied with the fluid. The patient sleeps several hours after the completion of the operation.

MANY OPERATIONS

"Hundreds of operations," says Dr. Marcou, "were performed in Russia during my stay. I watched some of them. Not one case of death has yet been reported.

The anaesthetic is said to be particularly valuable for head and neck operations, where the use of the ether or chloroform mask interferes with the surgeon's work. In such diseases as make the introduction of salty solutions into the blood undesirable or dangerous, says Dr. Marcou, salt may be replaced by glucose or bicarbonate of soda.
